INQUIRY INTO NAVY OFFICER'S LETTER TO AVIATION FIRM

Swanson Orders R. D. Weyerbacher to Explain Alleged Offer to Serve as Technical Adviser.

CONCERN SEEKING U. S. CONTRACTS

But Chief of Operations Standley Says Commander Did Not Propose to Aid It in This Respect.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Secretary of the Navy Swanson ordered Commander Ralph D. Weyerbacher, naval aircraft procurement officer, before a board of inquiry today to explain a letter in which he was said to have offered his services as "technical adviser" to an aviation concern.

Swanson disclosed his action at a press conference, following a demand by Chairman McSwain of the House Military Affairs Committee for information concerning disposition of the charges, referred to the department by his committee.

"I think the officer is entitled to a public hearing," Swanson said. He added that the board would seek to determine the facts as submitted by the House committee."

Swanson said the letter was written "in such a way that I thought it ought to be inquired into."

Weyerbacher is one of two navy officers representing the department on a central aircraft procurement board recently set up by Admiral C. J. Peoples, Navy Paymaster-General and Treasury procurement officer.

Swanson said, however, he had not "heard" of any intention to make Weyerbacher chief naval aircraft procurement officer.

Admiral William H. Standley, chief of operations, after the conference insisted that Weyerbacher had not offered his influence to the company in connection with its bidding on navy contracts.

Swanson said there was precedent for navy officers serving as technical advisers but that most of them obtained temporary leave. He denied the officer was interested in contracts. Weyerbecher is an authority on lighter-than-air ships and helped supervise construction of the Shenandoah. Swanson said Weyerbacher would be represented by counsel with power to produce witnesses.

Chairman McSwain had said previously that the navy must take some action in the case of a high ranking officer accused of trying to get a $1500-a-month fee from a company that wanted to sell planes to the navy. Unless it did, he said, there would be "some action up here."

He explained that earlier this week the navy officer in question had appeared at a secret meeting in the military committee room and acknowledged that he offered to be a consulting engineer for a new airplane company for a monthly retainer fee of $1500, plus expenses and $100 for each day he actually worked.

Because of that testimony, McSwain said, the committee would oppose a reported plan to give this officer an important post in the navy's new procurement division.

The officer, McSwain said, "heard there was a possibility that he would get that job, and he just wanted to come up here and tell us that he favored competitive bidding so we would tell the President: 'All right, give him the job.'"

War-Profits Bill Approved.

The McSwain bill to remove profits from war was approved today by unanimous vote of the House Military Committee. The bill would "freeze" prices at the start of hostilities and authorize a universal draft under which the necessary man-power could be recruited, as well as industries and public services needed for the conduct of war.

McSwain said Speaker Byrns and the Rules Committee would be consulted with a view to getting the measure before the House next week.

King Called "Parasite" In Debate in Commons

He and Others of British Royal Family "Living on Wealth of Country," Laborite Member Declares.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—"We pay King George £10,750 a month and his son, the Duke of Kent and his wife one shilling a minute. These parasites are living on the wealth of the country," declared J. McGovern, Glasgow Laborite in the House of Commons debate on the bill to reorganize the dole system last night.

The King's allowances from Parliament amount to about £130,000, or $650,000 a year. This is roughly McGovern's figure—about $50,000 a month. Parliament increased the Duke of Kent's allowance to about $125,000 a year in view of his approaching marriage, since consummated, to Princess Marina of Greece. This is about a shilling, or 25 cents, a minute.

Ruled out of order, McGovern replied: "I say these people are part of a parasitical class which is living on the common people of this country and with no effort of their own to provide the means of life they enjoy."

Denounces Jubilee Expenditures.

Before he was called to order, McGovern said he had heard £30,000 to £40,000 ($150,000 to $200,000) was going to be spent on the Kings' silver jubilee celebrations this spring.

"I say it should be spent," he decried, "in erecting black flags throughout the length and breadth of this country for a day of national mourning for the common people who are being destroyed and degraded by this national Government."

"If your class goes to war," he said, "you will appeal to the workingmen to help you. And I hope when that day dawns the workers will use their rifles on the ruling classes."

Parliamentary rules in the House of Commons prohibit the mention of King George in debate but McGovern and his fellow radicals have burst forth against royalty several times in recent years.

A former councillor of the City of Glasgow, McGovern was elected to Parliament in 1930 and in the same year was thrown out of the House after taunting Lady Astor for "never earning a penny in your life." On several other occasions he has been ejected.

In 1931 he caused disorders not equaled in the memory of the oldest members when he and his aids made physical resistance to an order for his suspension.

Dole Order Suspended.

Surrendering to protests against the new dole regulations, the Government announced a temporary standstill in the order restoring cuts imposed by the new Unemployment Assistance Board.

Maj. Oliver Stanley, Minister of Labor, told the House of Commons:

"I don't disguise from the House that insofar as I was able to make a personal investigation I did feel there were evident difficulties in the administration of these regulations, and that largely owing to facts which it is was impossible to foresee, there were hardships being endured."

The new dole board began work this month with its new scales of relief pay, and the complete shift from decentralized control of the dole was to have been made next month.

DEATH FROM TICK BITE HELD ACCIDENTAL IN $25,000 SUIT

Widow Awarded Money Under Double Indemnity Clause in Husband's Insurance Policy.

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 6.—Mrs. Mercedes E. Foley of The Dalles won a suit yesterday to collect double indemnity on the insurance policy of her husband, Pat Foley, who died 17 days after being bitten by a wood tick while on a hunting trip.

The $25,000 policy had a double indemnity clause calling for payment of twice the amount in case the insured was killed accidentally.

The jury in Federal Court held the bite constituted a "bodily injury, effected through external violent and accidental means," and awarded Mrs. Foley the additional $25,000.

U. S.-GERMAN COTTON BARTER DEAL DEAD, ROOSEVELT SAYS

Plan Upset by Question Over Possible Violation of Anti-Dumping Clause, He Explains.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—President Roosevelt declared today the proposed cotton barter deal with Germany was dead.

He explained at a press conference that Germany offered 25 per cent in cash and 75 per cent in goods for American cotton. The question, he said, immediately arose within the Government and among United States merchants whether the 75 per cent in goods would not be material barred by the anti-dumping clause. Because of this, the deal was finally abandoned, he said.

BARRATRY CHARGES AGAINST TWO IN ARKANSAS DROPPED

Ward H. Rodgers and Commonwealth College Director Are Released.

By the Associated Press.

LEPANTO, Ark., Feb. 6. — Barratry charges against Ward H. Rodgers, former Federal emergency relief administration instructor, and Lucien Koch, director of Commonwealth College, Mena, Ark., were dismissed today.

Dismissal of these charges against the two young organizers for the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union was the second victory in the courts for the union in two days.

Two white and two Negro organizers for the union, charged with obtaining money by false pretenses, won directed verdicts of acquittal before Circuit Judge Neil Killough at Wynne, Ark., yesterday. The city charged Rogers with spreading "false rumors and calumnies whereby discord and disquiet may grow among neighbors." Rodgers and Koch were arrested here Saturday at a rally of tenant farmers.

ARCHDUKE ALBRECHT'S DIVORCE READY, REPORT SAYS

Budapest Hears Court Will Grant Decree to Pretender of Hungarian Throne.

By the Associated Press.

BUDAPEST, Feb. 6.—A special court appointed by Regent Horthy was understood today to be ready to legalize the divorce of the Archduke Albrecht, pretender to the Hungarian throne, and his morganatic wife, Mme. Irene Lelbach.

The divorce proceedings began Sept. 1, last year, and it was understood one reason for their institution was to clear the way for the Archduke to claim the Hungarian throne. At the same time, however, it was rumored that the Archduke's wife wanted a settlement of about $2,000,000 before she would release her husband from his marriage vows.

Today it was indicated that the complications had been cleared up and that the Archduke had made a settlement satisfactory to his wife.

Special Session Summoned to Enact Primary Law Which Laffoon Opposes.

By the Associated Press.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 6.—Seizing his opportunity when his political adversary, Gov. Ruby Laffoon, went to Washington, Lieutenant-Governor A. B. Chandler today called a special session of the Kentucky Legislature for Friday to enact a compulsory primary law.

Gov. Laffoon opposes a primary and recently got the Democratic State Central Committee to call a convention this summer to nominate his successor and other officers. The convention was called despite a plea from President Roosevelt, presented by Senator Alben Barkley that a primary be called.

ROOSEVELT BACKS RICHBERG IN AUTO LABOR BOARD ROW

Defends Work of Wolman Group in Letter to A. F. of L. Counsel, Who Demanded Its Abolition.

"FOR PRESIDENT TO DETERMINE"

"All Employes Being Given Full and Fair Opportunity to Designate Their Representatives."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—In a letter which was regarded as a defense of his adviser, Donald R. Richberg, President Roosevelt told the American Federation of Labor yesterday that "it is for the President to determine" whether the Automobile Labor Board, headed by Dr. Leo Wolman, should be continued.

When the President renewed the automobile code recently and continued the Wolman board, Federation leaders attacked Richberg, NRA co-ordinator and director of the Emergency Council. They called him a traitor to labor, to which he replied that they wanted him to serve one group, rather than the Government.

Abolition Demanded.

The President's letter was in reply to one by Charlton Ogburn, Federation counsel, asking that the Automobile Labor Board be abolished. Ogburn said in his letter that tension in the automobile industry was "extremely grave" and that ~~automobile workers had the right to~~ submit disputes to the National Labor Relations Board, headed by Francis Biddle.

Federation leaders had charged that the board's employe elections and method of collective bargaining were illegal. Ogburn called it "completely unacceptable to organized labor" and said that when the Federation withdrew from an agreement under which it was set up, the board became legally nonexistent. With this President Roosevelt disagreed.

President's Reply.

The Wolman board "is not only functioning to prevent discrimination against employes and otherwise to carry out the purposes of its creation," Mr. Roosevelt's letter said, "but it is engaged also in the very important work of holding elections, whereby through the secret ballot, under Government supervision, all employes are being given a full and fair opportunity to designate their representatives, choosing them either as individuals, or as representatives of a labor organization."

If the Government should annul the board's powers, Mr. Roosevelt said, "it would be placed in the position of preventing the employes from voting."

Ogburn's letter asking for abolition of the board was dated Jan. 28, three days before the code was renewed.

Before he received Mr. Roosevelt's letter, Ogburn had also asked NRA's administrative board to discard the Wolman board's election returns.

Unionization Campaign.

Federation leaders today were completing plans for industrial unions for automobiles and steel.

Francis J. Dillon, general organizer, left for the automobile centers to rally employes in the interest of the United Automobile Workers. He said last night in Atlanta, Ga., that the federation was ready to advise the automobile workers if a strike were found necessary.

Steel organization gave the federation leaders a perplexing problem. Michael F. Tighe, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, the federation unit in the industry, has begun expulsion proceedings against members who attended a "rump" convention that wanted to make the Amalgamated more militant.

Such a policy also is demanded by several officials high in federation councils. President William Green said yesterday the council would consider formation of "federal" unions, directly under the federation, eventually to be combined into one big union to consolidate with or replace the Amalgamated.

Support Also for Williams.

A letter indorsing S. Clay Williams as chairman of the National Recovery Board was made public by Mr. Roosevelt today, in reply to organized labor demands for Williams' resignation.

The letter was addressed to Green. Its publication was occasioned by statements attributed to Green that the President had told him it was inadvisable to remove Williams at this time.

Mr. Roosevelt turned to his secretary, Marvin H. McIntyre, and di-

FIRE TRUCK HITS WAGON; TWO MEN KILLED, TWO HURT

Inhalator Crew on Hurry Call Runs Into Coal Cart at Twenty-first and Chestnut Streets.

A fireman and a truck driver were killed and two other men were injured when a Fire Department inhalator truck, traveling at high speed, crashed into a coal truck at Twenty-first and Chestnut streets at 2:20 p. m. today.

Jeff Bone, 7120 Bancroft avenue, driver of the coal truck, which was empty, was decapitated as the light Fire Department car smashed into the truck and drove it on to the sidewalk.

John Dressel, 34 years old, 3954 Delor street, a member of Engine Co. No. 41, riding as passenger in the inhalator truck, suffered skull fractures and internal injuries, from which he died at City Hospital 40 minutes after the crash, without having regained consciousness.

Lester Hatcher, 29, 4839 Labadie avenue, driver of the Fire Department car, was taken to City Hospital suffering from cuts and bruises. Fred Wylie, Negro, 34A South Channing avenue, helper on Bone's truck, suffered slight cuts on the head and face.

Hatcher and Dressel were on their way from the engine house at Eleventh street and Lucas avenue to City Hospital No. 2 when they crashed into Bone's truck. Hatcher said that he was driving at a brisk speed, and that his siren was sounding. He said that Bone, driving south in Twenty-first street, pulled directly in front of him, so that there was no chance to avoid his truck.

Wylie told policemen he did not hear the siren, but Hatcher's statement that it was being sounded was confirmed by persons on Chestnut street who saw the Fire Department car heading westward.

The inhalator truck was called out after Ernest Well, Negro porter for the Angelica Jacket Co. at 1419 Olive street, had collapsed while at work. Well was dead when received at City Hospital No. 2.

TOWNSEND PLAN IS CALLED BEST PROMOTION JOB IN U. S.

Secretary of Social Security Association Urges Congressional Inquiry Into Financing.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—A congressional investigation of the financing and propaganda back of the Townsend old-age pension plan was proposed to the Senate Finance Committee today by Abraham Epstein, secretary of the American Association for Social Security.

Epstein characterized the Townsend campaign as "the finest promotion job in American history."

"Where is the rake-off in the Townsend plan?" Senator Clark (Dem.), Missouri, asked.

"It's for your committee to find out," Epstein replied. "Congress has a duty to investigate the source of the propaganda behind the Townsend plan."

Epstein pointed out the Townsend plan originated in Los Angeles, which he said was "full of promoters."

Senator Gore (Dem.), Oklahoma, said he understood Townsend organizers made as much as $10 and $15 a day.

43.5 PCT. RISE IN INTERNAL REVENUE COLLECTIONS IN 1934

Upturn in All General Classes, as Compared With Figures of Previous Year.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Collections of internal revenue rose 43½ per cent during 1934 to total $2,994,172,572, the Treasury announced today. Collections for the previous year were $2,090,947,279.

All general classes showed increases. The list was led by agricultural adjustment taxes, with an upturn of 257 per cent. However, this levy was not in effect for all of 1933.

Corporation income tax returns increased 36 per cent with individual incomes returning an increase of 20 per cent. Miscellaneous internal income was up 28 per cent.

Individual income.	375,284,304	451,746,002
Agri. Adjustment...	140,563,249	500,308,155

New York State was still chief revenue producer, returning $586,032,129. Illinois beat out North Carolina for the No. 2 position, because of processing taxes on meat packing plants. North Carolina, with heavy tobacco taxes, paid $278,751,764 against $291,078,144 for Illinois.

NINE POLICEMEN INJURED IN ENGLISH DOLE CLASHES

Demonstrators at Sheffield Protest Against New System of Distributing Payments.

By the Associated Press.

SHEFFIELD, England, Feb. 6.—Nine policemen were injured and 20 persons arrested today when several thousand persons clashed with police during a meeting of protest against the newly reorganized dole system.

The crowd tried to get the City Council to reecive some of its members and, when the council refused, the demonstrators threw stones at the city hall, breaking windows. Police, both mounted and on foot, charged into the crowd.

The protest was directed against the new method of dole payments. Complaints say there is inequality in the system.

BELL TO BE RUNG WHEN JURY REACHES HAUPTMANN VERDICT

Traditional Ceremony to Be Held at Courthouse in Flemington, N. J.

By the Associated Press.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Feb. 6.—A week from today, unless the Hauptmann trial prophets are wrong, one of the Constables in the Hunterdon County Courthouse will climb to the bell tower and pull the bell rope. The verdict in Bruno Hauptmann's trial will be ready.

This is the traditional way of announcing in Hunterdon County that a jury is ready to announce its decision. It has been done in so many cases that no one remembers when the practice started.

Paul Alvater, deputy constable, rings the bell a minute or so before 10 o'clock every morning, and again at the end of the noon recess.

HAUPTMANN JURORS HAVE ANOTHER PARTY

Celebrate the Birthday of Constable Sue, One of Their Bailiffs.

By the Associated Press.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Feb. 6.—The Hauptmann jurors wore smiling faces today after one of their last big fetes of the trial—a birthday dinner with three cakes, two dozen roses and "Sherlock Holmes Saltines."

The fete was in honor of Constable Sue's thirty-ninth birthday. The jury gave her a fern in a wicker basket with pink ribbon on a handle and a card saying, "Best wishes to Constable Sue from the bunch."

Constable Sue is Mrs. Susan Dilts. "The Bunch" toasted her with verse for two hours, eating orange cake, pound cake and angel food between verses.

The quatrains and limericks they penned were brought in by a telegraph boy and passed around the long table. Gusts of laughter echoed through the Union Hotel dining room from behind the screens that shut off the jury table.

A bit wistful, Mrs. Dilts' husband, J. D. Dilts, a bespectacled former County Freeholder, listened from the dining room door. Their stepdaughter, Grace Dilts, a dietitian, brought in the final cake, a two-tier affair iced in a flower pattern. Mrs. Pearl Conover, another constable, prepared place cards, and everyone but Mrs. Mary Brelsford had a new partner. She sat in her old place, but had a new dress for the occasion, smart black with white lace.

Mrs. Rosie Pill also had a new black dress with rhinestone buckles. She chatted merrily with Robert Cravatt, the one jury bachelor, who wore a red tie.

Mrs. Verna Snyder, the blacksmith's wife, paired off with Liscom Case, who came down for the birthday dinner despite his ailing heart.

"It Is American Thing to Do," Says John Turcich of Chicago.

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—John Turcich walked into the office of the Unemployment Relief Service yesterday and paid back $55.94, the total he and his family had received while on relief from Nov. 17 to Dec. 17, 1933.

Turcich has a job now with the Western Electric Co. in Cicero.

"It is the American thing to do," he said. "Every citizen on relief who again gets a job should do the same. It is nothing to my credit. It's just honest, that's all."

Many Dead in German Floods.

MUNICH, Germany, Feb. 6.—Several deaths were reported today in Southern Germany, where rising rivers and broken dykes have followed severe snow and rainstorms. An avalanche killed a patrol of four soldiers in Bavaria and two other members of the group have been missing for two days. Three persons were drowned in the Rhine, which is rapidly rising.

HAUPTMANN DEFENSE TRIES TO DISCREDIT LADDER STORY

Bronx Plumber Testifies He Didn't Notice Board Missing From Defendant's Attic as State Expert Has Asserted.

SILVER NITRATE TEST OF FINGERPRINTS

Dr. E. M. Hudson Asserts He Found More Than 500 on Ladder—Woman Tells of Christmas Gift From Prisoner.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Feb. 6.—Gustave Miller, a Bronx plumber, testified today that he did not observe that an attic floor board was missing from the attic at the home of Mruno Richard Hauptmann as late as August, 1934.

Miller said he went to the attic early in August of last year to investigate a leak.

Theron J. Main of Warsaw, N. Y., testified for the defense that he saw Fisch change a $20 gold note in a New York bank on Aug. 2, 1933. The State brought a cross-examining answer to the effect the note was a yellow back. "Haven't you read in every paper that the $20 gold bills in the ransom didn't have yellow backs?" Main hadn't read that.

Woman Tells of Visits.

Mrs. Gerta Henkel, often mentioned by the State in the trial, took the stand, exchanged smiles with Hauptmann and denied that he had ever been anything but "gentlemanly and honorable" towards her. Hauptmann liked coffee, she affirmed, and came to her house in the mornings once or twice a week (while his wife was away, the State once brought out) and stayed 15 minutes or so each time. She liked coffee, too.

Court was adjourned at 4:31 p. m. when the defense completed the direct examination of Dr. E. M. Hudson, fingerprint expert.

Earlier in today's session of Hauptmann's trial for the murder of the Lindbergh baby, the defense continued its efforts to show that Isador Fisch, Hauptmann's former business partner, got the $50,000 ransom paid by Dr. John F. Condon as Col. Lindbergh's intermediary.

It is the defendant's story that Fisch left $14,600 of the ransome money in a shoebox at the Hauptmann home Dec. 2, 1933, a few days before he sailed for Germany where he died in March, 1934. Hauptmann professed not to have discovered what was in the shoebox until last August.

Most of the morning session, however, was taken up in the questioning of State policemen about the possibility of fingerprints on the kidnaper's ladder.

The Day's First Witness.

He said he was a radio performer, living in the Bronx.

Reilly showed him a photograph.

Q. Do you recognize that man? A. I do.

Q. Who is he? A. Isador Fisch.

Streppone testified he kept records of all work performed. He told of repairing a radio for Fisch May 10, 1933.

Wilentz questioned the competency of the repair record. "However, I am not going to object," the prosecutor said.

Streppone said the radio was taken to his shop by Fisch and left five days while $3 worth of repair work was performed. Fisch came back to the shop on a Sunday.

Q. Did Fisch have a package? A. Yes.

Attorney-General David T. Wilentz objected but the radio man was allowed to go on.

The now dead German furrier, the witness said, left the package about six hours and returned for it.

Once Adjudged Insane.

Wilentz took the witness.

Q. You were adjudged insane were you not? A. Yes, 1928. Discharged, no psychosis.

Reilly took the witness again and asked Streppone if he had not been discharged as cured. The witness answered yes.

Wilentz again questioned him.

Q. How many times have you

COMMITTEE VOTES FOR CHANGES IN WORK RELIEF BILL

Adopts Democratic Amendments and Defeats Proposal to Substitute $2,000,000,000 Dole.

DEFERS FINAL ACTION UNTIL TOMORROW

Meanwhile Debate Begins on Measure on Floor of Senate Without Waiting for Report.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6. — The Senate Appropriations Committee today unanimously agreed to the Democratic amendments to the administration $4,880,000,000 work relief bill reducing the powers to be conferred upon the President.

It was reported that a proposal to substitute a direct relief appropriation of $2,000,000,000 for the administration recommendations was lost by a 10-to-10 tie.

Previously the dole substitute had been adopted, 9 to 8.

The substitute was offered by Senator Adams (Dem.), Colorado, and was reported to have been supported by Chairman Glass (Dem.), Virginia, and all but one Republican member. Senator Norbeck (Rep.), South Dakota, it is understood, sided with the administration.

Probable Lineup on Dole.

Senators McCarran of Nevada and Copeland of New York later were reported to have voted for the substitute, making four Democrats of the committee against the administration measure as it stands. Senator Nye (Rep.), North Dakota, was reported to have been the only Republican not voting. This would make the lineup as follows: For the substitute—Democrats: Glass, Copeland, Adams, McCarran; Republicans: Hale, Keyes, Steiwer, Dickinson, Townsend, Carey.

Adams first proposed a $1,880,000,000 'dole" substitute, but Copeland suggested making it $2,880,000,000 and the ballot was taken on the larger sum.

Sections Eliminated.

It was apparent that the sharp disagreement on the measure, even among Democrats themselves, was continuing. One section eliminated by the committee would have authorized the President to make loans or payments to needy individuals and make grants, loans or contracts without restriction.

Another provision eliminated would have permitted the President to acquire by purchase or by the power of eminent domain, any real property, then improve it and dispose of it as he saw fit.

Still another section struck out would have authorized the executive to consolidate, redistribute, abolish or transfer the functions and property of any emergency Federal agency and delegate the power conferred upon him to any Government bureau or corporation.

The words "relieving economic maladjustments" also were struck out of the provision describing the purpose of the fund.

Final Action Tomorrow.

Senator Byrnes (Dem.), South Carolina, one of the administration leaders handling the bill, was in constant communication with the White House by telephone as the committee's executive session proceeded. At one time he hurried from the room and got Senator McAdoo (Dem.), California to join the meeting.

The committee deferred final action on the measure until tomorrow.

Meanwhile, debate on the measure which the House has approved began on the Senate floor without waiting for the committee to act. Senator Barbour (Rep.), New Jersey, contended for separation of the direct relief fund of $880,000,000 from the remainder of the bill.

Congressmen were informed that, although President Roosevelt would be directly in charge of expenditures under the measure, he probably would delegate the details to subordinates. It was thought possible that among them would be Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Public Works Administrator; Rear Admiral Christian J. Peoples, head of the procurement division of the Treasury, and Harry Hopkins, Emergency Relief Administrator.

DEFENSE TRIES TO ATTACK LADDER TESTIMONY

been in an institution because of mental disorders? A. I'd make it about five times.

Q. Sure it was not eight times? A. I'd say five.

Q. At one time didn't you threaten bodily harm to one of the ladies of a charitable organization? A. Yes.

Q. And another time you wrote her filthy letters? A. Abusive language, yes sir.

Streppone said he was merely feeling "depressed" on the occasions he was in mental institutions, but that doctors called his ailment "maniac depressive psychosis." This was later corrected in the record by order of the court to "manic depressive psychosis." He insisted he was not suffering from any mental ill at the moment.

Wilentz brought from Streppone that he had returned to Bellevue Hospital, in July, 1934, for a mental condition.

Q. Then you have been in an institution since 1928? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have been in an institution since you fixed the radio? A. Yes, sir.

Streppone said he had come to Flemington yesterday with Malcolm Weiss of Reilly's office. He was excused after Reilly adduced that he had been discharged from Bellevue Hospital in July, 1934, after five days.

Lieut. Paul Sjostrom, investigator for the State police, was called and a dispute ensued between C. Lloyd Fisher, defense attorney, and Wilentz on the whereabouts of the kidnaper's ladder.

The defense was permitted to examine the ladder last night and Wilentz indicated it had not been restored to the State's custody.

Late last night a State Trooper on duty at the Courthouse was instructed by his superiors that no one but Arthur J. Koehler, Federal wood expert, and Detective Lewis J. Bornman of the State Police, were to be permitted to see the ladder.

Police officers were dispatched to bring the ladder, which had been examined a second time by two local business men, familiar with lumber.

The ladder, having been in the County Clerk's office all night, was brought in.

Sjostrom told Fisher he did not have his photographs or reports on the examination of the ladder in court.

Fisher tried to show that the photographs did not give a complete view of every part of the ladder and that the parts pictured could not be identified.

Q. How many photographs were taken of the ladder? A. 68.

Q. Is that all? A. Yes.

Q. Does that mean you got only 68 fingerprints? A. There were approximately 125 finger marks in those photographs.

Q. How about the palm prints, were there any of those? A. Yes, palm marks.

Q. Were they photographed, too? A. They were.

No Prints Found at First.

Q. You didn't find any fingerprints with the State police methods? A. No.

Q. But after 13 days, with Dr. Hudson's method, some were found? A. Several hundred people handled the ladder between March 1 and the time the silver nitrate process of Dr. Hudson was used.

Q. So after 13 days Sergeant Kelly (F. A. Kelly, fingerprint expert) found some? A. None of value. There were so many.

The investigator said the State police had examined the ladder immediately after arrival at the estate after the crime and found no prints. He said he understood the police wore gloves when handling the ladder and none of their prints appeared.

The Lieutenant said Dr. Hudson did not process the ladder, but only demonstrated his silver nitrate method to State Troopers who later employed it in their hunt for prints. He also testified he had never submitted the ransom notes to Hudson for examination.

Q. Did you ever advise Dr. Hudson 1200 fingerprints were taken from the ladder? A. No sir, I never did.

Q. Or that 1200 pictures were taken? A. No.

68 Pictures of Ladder Taken.

The 68 pictures taken of the ladder were then produced and Fisher brought out that there was no information as to the exact spot the photographs showed. Sjostrom said they were classified merely by the ladder sections from which they were taken.

Fisher also brought out that only 10 small pictures had been taken of the entire third section of the ladder. The section was the top part and the State's theory is it was not used by the kidnaper to enter the nursery.

Q. Now, you ran down the identities of those fingerprints you found on the ladder? A. Some.

Q. As far as possible? A. As far as possible.

Q. How many were identified. A. Eight.

Q. Did at any time you identify the fingerprints of this defendant, Richard Hauptmann? A. No.

Q. If this defendant wore gloves, his fingerprints wouldn't show? A. No.

Q. It's been your experience that criminals frequently wear gloves? A. Yes.

Fisher intervened to ask: "A mother or a nurse putting a baby to bed doesn't wear gloves, in your experience?" "Not in my experience."

BEN HEIER, MRS. BERTHA HOFF, JOSEPH TARTELL,

ALL of whom were on the stand yesterday. Heier testified he saw Isador Fisch at the cemetery the night of the ransom settlement. The court barred Mrs. Hoff's story. Tartell was used in attempt to attack the State's contention that Hauptmann passed a ransom bill at a theater.

Sjostrom told Fisher that he didn't know whether the silver nitrate process would "bring back" old prints.

He pointed out, when questioned by Wilentz, that the process was unknown to the State police on March 1, 1932. Many hands had been on the ladder, including those of members of Gov. Moore's Crime Commission (expert police officials from all parts of the country), before the silver nitrate process was applied.

Another Fingerprint Man.

Another State trooper, Sergeant Louis Kubler, a fingerprint expert, followed Sjostrum to the stand. Fisher immediately began to question him on the examination of the ladder for fingerprints.

He told of Dr. Hudson's visit to the Lindbergh estate on March 12 or 14, after the kidnaping.

Q. What was he down there for? A. to demonstrate a new process, known as the "silver nitrate process" designed to bring out latent fingerprints on wood.

Dr. Hudson, Kubler said, demonstrated his process on two other pieces of wood in the basement of the Lindbergh home. One section of the ladder was used later by Dr. Hudson to make a test in the back yard.

Q. Any prints discovered? A. Yes, a few, but they were not readable.

Dr. Hudson left soon afterward, Kobler said, and he continued the application of the process, "off and on" for two weeks.

Q. Eventually, you did complete the processing of the ladder. How many prints were found? A. About 125 markings were found. Only about 20 were readable.

The witness testified he was the only man who continued the process on the ladder but other duties had interrupted him several times during the two weeks.

Doesn't Know of Letter.

Q. Now, Sergeant, don't you know one of your superiors wrote Dr. Hudson that 500 markings were taken from the ladder? A. No, I do not?

Q. But you say definitely now that no 500 markings were found? A. Only 120 or 125 markings were found.

Fisher, asked him what effect silver nitrate had when applied to wood. Kubler said the lumber turned red, but its color could be restored by washing it with a bichloride of mercury solution.

Fisher, after asking about the cleaning solution, inquired: "It tends completely and permanently to eradicate the finger prints from the ladder, doesn't it?" "It does," the witness said.

The attorney then made much of the fact the ladder prints were destroyed when the silver nitrate coloring was washed.

The witness asserted he did not know that Dr. Hudson had produced 500 prints from the ladder or that 1200 pictures had been made of it.

Kubler told Fisher he had never used Dr. Hudson's process in investigation of an actual crime. Fisher sought to recall to him his resort to the process in taking prints from a pick handle in a murder case. "That is not a fact," Kubler replied.

Wilentz objected that Fisher's questions were "impeaching the witness."

Judge Stops Questioning.

Justice Trenchard stopped the questions, observing, "You are debating with your witness and leading him."

Fisher asked a few more questions and had the witness say that a man might make a print at one time and not at another.

Q. So a man might carry lumber around, handle it and still not leave a print? A. It is possible, yes.

Wilentz took the witness for a brief cross-examination and elicited the testimony that the silver nitrate was washed from the ladder by Arthur Koehler, wood expert from the United States Forest Products Laboratory, Madison, Wis. The purpose of the washing was to prepare the ladder for court.

Trooper Kelly Called.

Trooper Frank A. Kelly of the State Police was called next to tell of his methods in examining the interior of the Lindbergh nursery for fingerprints. As a State witness, Kelly told of using a black powder method and failing to find readable prints. Wilentz objected that the testimony was repetitious, but Justice Trenchard allowed Fisher to proceed with his questions.

A beer stein, Fisher brought out, was on the nursery window ledge, at one side, when Kelly made his examination of the room. Kelly said the ransom note lay on the ledge not far from the stein.

Fisher pursued his questioning until Wilentz protested that "this has been gone over time and time again." Justice Trenchard curbed him, and he said he would try to ask questions which had not been answered.

He asked if Kelly learned from Dr. Hudson that 1200 photographs had been made of the ladder. Kelly said he did not know.

Q. Do you remember discussing the construction of the ladder with Dr. Hudson? A. I don't recall ever discussing it with Dr. Hudson.

Fisher pointed to the upright which the State says came from the Hauptmann attic.

Q. Didn't you discuss this upright particularly? A. Not that I recall.

Objections Are Sustained.

Wilentz renewed his objections to Fisher's questions as repetitions and was sustained. Fisher said he wanted to clear the confusion with proper answers from the witness.

"You create the confusion by these irrelevant remarks of yours," Justice Trenchard said, addressing Fisher.

Fisher then demanded if Kelly had not pointed out there was only one nail hole in the side of the ladder and remarked to Hudson it was very significant in his mind. "That is absolutely not the fact," Kelly replied.

The strategy of the attorney was immediately apparent. The State's wood expert, Arthur Koehler, and others have testified there were several nail holes in that upright and that they fitted perfectly with the nail holes on the beams in Hauptmann's attic, where they said a floor board was missing. Fisher was apparently seeking to create the suspicion that the police deliberately put the nail holes in the ladder to manufacture evidence against Hauptmann.

Kelly was next asked if he knew a Miss McGill, Dr. Hudson's secretary, and he replied affirmatively.

Fisher renewed his question about the ladder investigations.

Q. Did the police make a scale model of the ladder? A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever learn that similar ladders were built and used in South Jersey among Negro fruit pickers? A. No.

Kelly said he made no effort to learn the age of the lumber, or when it was cut. No reports on the point, he added, had come to his attention.

Wilentz renewed his protests that the testimony Fisher sought to lead Kelly through already had been given. Fisher sat down, showing obvious irritation.

Wilentz, taking the witness, sought to demonstrate where the beer stein stood on the nursery window ledge. Kelly explained it was in a "recess" at the side. Wilentz and Fisher, walking to the witness stand together, collided, causing laughter.

Wilentz, Fisher and Kelly argued whether the stein protruded from the recess. Fisher produced a newspaper picture of the window, in which Kelly said the mug appeared to protrude. Wilentz objected to it as an exhibit, because it "was all marked up."

Justice Trenchard suggested the picture might be admitted if Kelly would state that it gave a true representation of the scene on the kidnaping night. Kelly could not be sure and suggested that he might "do better" with the original photograph.

Wilentz adduced that the picture was not taken for the Hauptmann trial but was a true representation of the window on the night of the crime. Kelly was excused.

Q. Did you know Isador Fisch? A. Yes, I worked with him.

Q. Where? A. At the Knickerbocker Pie Baking Co.

Drove Fisch About.

Bruchmann said he drove Fisch about, making sales of products.

Q. After you stopped working for him did you see him again? A. I did.

Q. When? A. Some time in May, 1933.

The husky-voiced witness said he was "hacking" at the time when Fisch came up to his stand one night about 7 o'clock and spoke to him.

"I want to show that Fisch displayed gold backs," Reilly argued. "I'm forced to disclose what I wish to prove with this witness. I want to show that Fisch delivered the shoebox to Hauptmann."

Q. Did Fisch display anything to you? A. Yes.

Q. What was it?

Wilentz objected again and he and Reilly walked to the bench to confer on the proposed testimony with the Justice.

The conference ended and Justice Trenchard called the noon recess at 12:27 p. m.

At the conference, Justice Trenchard ruled that the defense must show that the "gold backs" the taxicab driver allegedly saw in Fisch's possession were ransom money or the line of questioning could not be pursued.

Display of Bills.

In response to a question from Reilly, the witness related that Fisch got into his cab and he drove him to a certain destination.

"He took a roll of bills out of his pocket," the witness said, telling how Fisch left the cab. "He gave me a $5 bill but I can't swear whether it was a gold note or not."

The prosecution objected and the answer was struck out.

Reilly said "for the purpose of the record" the intention of the question was to show that after April 2, 1932, and to the time that Fisch sailed for Europe, he had plenty of money.

Wilentz failed to have Reilly's statement excluded from the record but Justice Trenchard ordered Bruchmann's answer to Reilly's last question expurged.

Plumber Takes Stand.

Q. Now in 1933 and 1934 did you have a shop in the Bronx? A. Yes.

Q. Did you work for Mrs. Rauch (Hauptmann's landlady)? A. Yes, since 1931.

Q. Were you called to her house in August, 1934? A. Yes.

Q. Was that the house Hauptmann lived in? A. Yes.

Miller said he called at Mrs. Rauch's home in August, 1934.

Q. When you went there what did you do? A. Mrs. Rauch said there was a leak in the house and would I come up.

The plumber recited he went to the Hauptmann apartment, found the defendant and his wife present and was shown to a closet where there was a leak.

"There are two valves in there, hot and cold," said the witness, identifying the Hauptmann broom closet.

There was water coming down the outside of a vent pipe in the closet, Miller explained.

He arose, faced the jury and demonstrated with a gesture the location of the pipe.

"There's a couple of shelves there, maybe three, I don't know," he went on.

The plumber told of cleaning from a chair in the closet through the trap door to the attic and finding a leak in the roof around the vent pipe.

Q. Was it raining that day? A. Right. I had my raincoat on.

"I seen the water coming down the stack (vent pipe)," Miller went on. "I had my candle. I always carry my candle so I can see where I'm going."

Noticed No Board Missing.

The witness told of walking over the floor boards of the attic in search of other leaks. Rain, he said, was coming in the south window also. (The window is near the section of floor where the State contended Hauptmann removed the board for use in the ladder.)

Q. Did you see any board missing from the floor? A. No.

The State has tried to prove that one upright in the kidnaper's ladder was made from a board taken from the floor of the attic of Hauptmann's home.

Q. How long were you up there in the attic? A. Six or seven minutes.

Q. And you had the natural light from the window and the light of your candle? A. Yes.

Q. And you noticed no part of the floor board missing to the best of your knowledge. A. I did not.

Q. Your best recollection is that you didn't notice any boards missing in August, 1934? A. No.

Q. Did you see any boards in the Rauch cellar? A. Yes, in 1931. I was called by Mrs. Rauch.

Q. What kind of boards did you see in the cellar? A. They looked like about 5 or 5½ inches wide. There were two leaning against the wall.

Miller said Mrs. Rauch was the only person who had a key to the cellar, but his remark was struck from the record at the request of the Attorney-General.

Similar Boards in Cellar.

Q. Were the boards in Mrs. Rauch's cellar similar to this board (showing Miller the floor board alleged to have been taken from Hauptmann's attic)? A. Right.

Q. You were called in many times after November, 1931, by Mrs. Rauch? A. Yes.

Q. Did you repair the leaky place in the roof, or did you leave materials so it could be fixed? A. I left material.

Not Sure About Boards.

"Was it a clothes closet?" the Attorney-General asked, referring to the leaking Hauptmann closet. A. A clothes closet doesn't have shelves.

Q. But was it a clothes closet? A. I'd call it more a linen closet.

Q. What day of the week? A. Early August.

Miller reached for a brown paper envelope, as though to produce his records of the repair job. "Never mind that," Wilentz said.

"Shoot?" Wilentz asked, glaring at Miller.

The witness concluded he was not sure all the floor boards extended entirely across the attic.

The Attorney-General turned to the boards in the cellar.

Q. What kind of wood? A. Rough flooring.

Q. Ponderosa pine? A. What?

Q. What kind of wood? A. Rough flooring.

The plumber said he had never seen the boards again.

Q. What was in the attic? A. I didn't notice.

Q. How about the radio and the rugs up there? A. Radio, I didn't see any.

Q. Would you say it wasn't there? A. I didn't look.

Q. Now, you've talked to the Department of Justice men? A. Right, go ahead.

Q. Did you tell them it would be a good idea to search the drain pipe? A. No.

Q. But you don't know anything else about the attic? A. What do I need to look for an attic for if I'm looking for what I want?

Miller described a kitchen window near the closet.

Q. So you had no trouble seeing what was in the closet? A. No.

Reilly took the witness for redirect examination that lasted only a few minutes and was devoted to the leak the plumber found in the roof.

Q. Where was the hole in the roof? A. It's past center.

Q. Past center? A. Right.

Reilly returned Miller to Wilentz.

Q. Was water coming down in the room. A. Right, the baby's room.

Says He's Volunteer Witness.

Reilly then called Theron J. Main of Warsaw, N. Y.

Q. Were you in New York, 1933? A. Yes.

Q. What was the date? A. August 2.

The witness said he came into New York by truck. At that time he said he was in the trucking business but now he was in the automotive accessory business.

Main told of driving a truck to New York Aug. 2, 1933. He asserted he came from Warsaw, N. Y., yesterday of his own volition to testify and knew none of the defense counsel or Hauptmann.

The truckman told of seeing a man in a New York bank, where he received money in connection with the shipment he carried from Warsaw, in August, 1933.

Main identified a photograph of Isador Fisch as the man he had seen in the bank.

Asserts Fisch Showed Gold Notes.

Later, the witness said, he saw Fisch again in a nearby restaurant. Fisch tendered a $20 gold note, he said, in payment to a bartender.

Q. Did you notice the bill? A. It was not a greenback, it was a gold note.

Q. Did this man leave the restaurant with you? A. He followed me out.

Q. Did he come up to you then and talk to you? He did.

Q. What did he say? The State objected successfully and Reilly reframed the question.

Q. Did he exhibit to you any gold notes? A. He did.

The witness testified it would "just be an assumption" that he recognized the kind and amount of money Fisch displayed.

Fisch's picture, he said, had appeared in a Buffalo newspaper and he recalled the incident of 1933.

"Yellow Back" Notes.

Wilentz objected to further questions about the money in Fisch's possession and Reilly released the witness for cross-examination.

Wilentz took the witness.

None of the $50,000 in ransom bills was a yellow back.

Q. Haven't you read in every paper that the twenty dollar gold bills in the ransom didn't have yellow backs? A. No.

Q. But you're sure the bill you saw had a yellow back. A. Yes.

Wilentz exhibited two pictures of a man.

Q. You won't say that is the man you talked to that night? A. I won't say. The forehead isn't as high.

Q. What bank were you in that night? A. It's the Terminal branch of the Corn Exchange Bank.

He said he cashed a check of Roycroft, & Son, being identified by a woman living on Dey street.

Ransom Money Displayed.

Wilentz ordered the ransom money, seized in Hauptmann's garage, brought in and showed it to the witness.

Q. Was that the way it looked? A. No, not exactly like that.

Wilentz inquired whether the bill he saw had gold all the way across one side. The truckman said there was gold on one side but it was "all mixed in."

The witness asserted he was sure he knew a gold certificate when he saw it.

Q. You didn't know Fisch? A. No.

Q. You never saw him before. A. No.

Q. You didn't ask his name. A. No.

Q. And you never saw him again until you saw his picture in 1934?

The examination was concluded and Main asked, "Can I go home now?" He was told he could.

Mrs. Henkel Questioned.

Mrs. Gerta Henckel, friend of the Hauptmanns, was then called. She wore a dark green dress with a large white collar and a little hat with a feather. She chewed gum between her answers to Reilly. She spoke with only a trace of accent.

Q. Did Mr. Hauptmann bring Mrs. Hauptmann to your house when she returned from Germany? A. Yes, the first week.

Mrs. Henkel said she knew Fisch in Germany "while I was in school yet." She testified Hauptmann treated his wife "very nice."

She recalled that Fisch returned to Germany in December, 1933. She did not know the relatives, but said she was aware that they had come to America. Hauptmann, she added, was a visitor at her home.

"In Mr. Hauptmann's conduct toward you, was there at any time anything ungentlemanly or dishonorable?" Reilly asked. "Certainly not," she replied.

Reilly surrendered his witness to the State. Wilentz began questioning her on her friendship with Hauptmann, and how frequently he visited her.

Q. There were mornings he came there, too. He liked coffee? A. Yes.

Q. You like coffee, too? A. You said it.

"Gee," "you said it," "gosh" and other exclamations appeared frequently in Mrs. Henkel's answers.

Q. You introduced Fisch to Hauptmann in your house? A. Yes, before I knew that they had met.

Q. How many times a week did Hauptmann come to your house for coffee? A. Once or twice.

Q. How long would he stay? A. Say, 10 or 15 minutes.

Q. Ever play cards with him in the shoemaker shop in Yorkville? A. We all did.

Q. How about you and Hauptmann? A. Yes, sometimes.

Q. Did you go shopping with Mr. Hauptmann on occasions? A. I don't know. I don't think so.

Q. Did you go to the brokerage office with Mr. Hauptmann? A. I think I went there once.

Q. Do you know anybody else there? A. Oh, no.

Q. Now the Saturday night before his arrest he was in your home? A. Yes.

Q. Kloppenburg wasn't there? A. Sure he was.

The men and women, she said, played cards. Mrs. Hauptmann was not present and the party broke up "after midnight."

Hauptmann's Christmas Gift.

Q. Did Mr. Hauptmann buy you a Christmas present? A. Yes.

With a motion of her hands and a smile, Mrs. Henkel explained the present was "a slip."

Q. Who brought it to you? A. Mr. and Mrs. Hauptmann.

Q. But Mr. Hauptmann bought it? A. Yes.

Reilly took the witness for short redirect examination. asked why she had not attended the Fisch farewell party and she replied he did not want her there because he had not been at her house recently.

Q. What business was he in? A. In the fur business.

Q. Did he borrow some money from your mother? A. No; from my father.

Q. How much? A. About $4000.

Wilentz interposed again. Responding to questions, Mrs. Henkel said Fisch lived in one room in her house and, so far as she knew, never owned a radio.

Wilentz took the witness and again obtained the admission that she told police she introduced Fisch and Hauptmann in July or August, 1932. She added the explanation that Fisch told her he and Hauptmann had met before.

Wilentz brought from her that she now remembered many things she forgot when first questioned by the Bronx police.

"You were questioned twice by the police," Wilentz asked, "and you told them you introduced Hauptmann to Fisch?" "Yes," the witness replied.

Nervous Before Police.

Mrs. Henkel told Reilly, who resumed questioning, that she was nervous when questioned in the Bronx.

Wilentz interrupted. Q. You aren't nervous now? A. I'm used to it now.

Q. Didn't the witnesses in this case assemble at your house? A. No.

No effort had been made by the defense to induce her to modify the statements she gave to the Bronx police, she said, in answer to Reilly's question. She was excused.

Hauptmann who had been following Mrs. Henkel's testimony closely, smiled broadly when she stepped down from the stand. Mrs. Hauptmann gave the witness a smile also.

Dr. Hudson on Finger Prints.

When the court session was resumed, Dr. Erasmus Mead Hudson, the New York criminologist, who is alleged, discovered 500 fingerprints on the kidnaper's ladder, was called by Frederick A. Pope, as the next defense witness.

Q. Doctor, have you had any experience in finger-print chemistry?" A. Yes; I first became interested in the subject in 1917, when I was in the navy.

Dr. Hudson explained he developed a familiarity with fingerprints when taking those of enlisted men in the navy during the World War. The customary method of detecting finger prints, he said, was the use of dry powder. He said he resorted to the silver nitrate process in his studies of the subject, learning it had been developed in France a number of years ago.

Dr. Hudson gave an explanation

SHEPARD'S WIFE HEAVY DRINKER, WITNESS SAYS

SOMETIMES USED STRAIGHT ALCOHOL

By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 6.—The defense in Maj. Charles A. Shepard's second trial for wife murder produced more witnesses today to tell of Mrs. Zenana Shepard's addiction to liquor and of her moody nature.

It hopes to prove that the second wife of the now retired 63-year-old army medical officer did not die at Fort Riley, Kan., of poison given by the Major, as the Federal Government charges, but died accidentally or committed suicide.

Shepard's Filipino house boy, Cenon Manoloto, testified Mrs. Shepard often "drank two—three pints of whisky in a day. He said 'I got it for her from bootleggers around Fort Omaha.'" Manoloto said Mrs. Shepard sometimes drank straight alcohol.

Manoloto, examined by Lloyd Kagey of defense counsel, said also that Mrs. Shepard drank heavily while they were in the Philippine Islands. She drank a quart of gin daily in the islands, he said, and was drunk nearly every day.

Neighbor's Testimony Read.

Lavenia Allen's testimony at the first trial was then read by Kagey. She was a neighbor of the Shepards at Fort Omaha.

Mrs. Shepard, she said, was moody and sometimes seemed to be not quite normal mentally or physically. Mrs Shepard told her she would never have another doctor so long as she lived and would not go to a hospital or dentist. She was afraid of them, she said.

Mrs. Shepard's teeth pained her, the witness said, and she constantly used "pain tablets" to kill the feeling.

Other Friends Testify.

Maj. Forest Holycross and his wife Helen, both of whom knew the Shepards at Fort Riley, testified in support of the defense contention of drunkenness.

Mrs. Shepard complained of an abdominal pain while Shepard was in San Antonio, Tex., Mrs. Holycross said, and said she was afraid that when Shepard returned home he would want her to go to a hospital. Mrs. Holycross also told of Mrs. Shepard's horror of hospitals.

The Government contends that love of Miss Grace Brandon, 28-year-old Brookfield stenographer whom Shepard met at San Antonio while taking a course in surgery, was the motive for the alleged murder. Miss Brandon testified for the State in both the first and second trials. Conviction in the first was set aside by the Supreme Court.

Mrs. Shepard's Illness.

A day or two after Mrs. Shepard became ill, Mrs. Holycross said, Shepard told his wife to "lie quietly, take care of yourself and as soon as you get well we'll send you to California for a complete rest.

"I'll go to California, but I'll go in a box," Mrs. Holycross said she replied.

The witness also told of seeing capsules on a table beside Mrs. Shepard's bed.

"She told me she was having too many doctors and preferred just to rest," the witness said. "She resented so much medical treatment."

Mrs. Holycross admitted under cross-examination that she had never seen Mrs. Shepard drunk, but insisted she always smelled liquor on her breath.

Mrs. Shepard once told her, she said, that she was not going to get any better, but did not say why she thought so.

Yesterday's Testimony; Witness Tells of Suicide Threats.

Dr. M. A. St. Peter, former army medical officer, testified yesterday that while Mrs. Shepard was under his observation at Fort Omaha she told him: "I've definitely made up my mind that I'm going to commit suicide."

"She heard a voice constantly telling her she was going insane like her mother," the witness said. "She was not a chronic alcoholic. She used alcohol to excess to press and push these things back in her mind."

He quoted her as saying she married Shepard not because she loved him, but because she thought he had money, and added she was unhappy with her husband, a man 22 years her senior.

Under cross-examination, Dr. St. Peter was asked why he did not testify regarding the suicide threats at the first trial.

"You can't tell those things unless they ask you the questions," he replied.

He also admitted under cross-examination that he had resigned from the Army "for the good of the service."

Shepard Leaves Stand.

Shepard emerged from cross-examination yesterday unshaken in his denial that he poisoned his wife. To the last question put by Defense Attorney Kagey, "Did you ever poison or attempt to poison your wife?" Shepard loudly replied: "I did not."

Shepard admitted he ordered flowers sent to Miss Brandon three days after his wife died.

He admitted, too, that he gave the stenographer a diamond once worn by his wife. This, however, he said was months after the death.

Maj. and Mrs. Max Weinberg, who knew the Shepards in the Philippine Islands and at Omaha, corroborated testimony tending to show Mrs. Shepard drank heavily.

SLANDER DEFENDANT

MISS HELEN FRICK

MISS FRICK TESTIFIES IN ART SLANDER SUIT

She Admits Saying Former Custodian of Father's Collection Was No Critic.

By the Associated Press.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Feb. 6.—Miss Helen Clay Frick, daughter of the late Henry Clay Frick, returned to the witness stand today in the hearing of the suit brought by James Howard Bridge, art writer, who charges she had slandered him and asks for $250,000 damages.

Miss Frick testified in Supreme Court yesterday, making her first appearance in a court action in her life. Bridge contends Miss Frick disparaged him by saying he was not in charge of her father's vast art collection and that his book on the Frick collection was full of inaccuracies.

Miss Frick admitted yesterday she had written a letter saying Bridge was not the curator of the Frick gallery, but insisted that he never had been. She admitted also that in the minutes of the meeting of Frick trustees in 1924, Bridge was listed as curator from 1915 to 1924, but said the listing was the fault of her brother Childs Frick, who, despite the fact he was a Princeton graduate and a scientist, "didn't understand the full significance of the world 'curator.'"

Charges Bridge Was Surly.

She said that in 1924 she decided to replace Bridge, whom she described as having shown impudence, insolence, sullenness and surliness, and "on top of that was becoming more disagreeable." After 1925, she said, these traits became "annoying," she said, and "crystallized into a very positive state of mind."

Miss Frick admitted writing a letter to Harold W. Wolfson, president of the National Studios, in which she said Bridge was not an art critic or an authority on art. She said she told Wolfson in a subsequent conversation that Bridge had no experience in fine art when her father had engaged him in 1914.

In 1914 or 1915, she said, when Bridge compiled a handbook on her father's collection she gave him "a certain amount of credit," but added the book was "full of inaccuracies." In later years, she testified, she particularly resented "his attitude and his bragging about the 1914 handbook."

Defends Her Mother.

She denied Bridge's assertion that her mother, who died in 1931, was an "arrogant" woman.

"She was very generous," Miss Frick said. "She loved her home and enjoyed her own family and friends. She was very kind to her employes and they all loved her."

As an instance of her mother's treatment of her servants, she cited the case of John Halroyd, former caretaker, now retired on a pension. When he became ill on one occasion, Miss Frick said, her mother installed him and his family in a cottage on her seashore estate in Massachusetts, saw to it that he had all the proper care and used to take him delicacies.

TRYING TO FIND FIRM THAT GOT CITY CONTRACT

Aldermen Learn "M. A. Klein Clothing Co." Got Awards After Standard Co. Quit Bidding.

One of the questions confronting the special aldermanic committee investigating reported connections of Aldermen with city contracts is the identity of the "M. A. Klein Clothing Co.," which delivered eight orders and was paid for $706 worth of supplies to city institutions during a four-week period after the Standard Clothing and Tailoring Co. delivered its last order.

It was disclosed last Thursday by the Post-Dispatch that Alderman Hoeflinger was listed in the 1933 city directory as secretary-treasurer of the Standard company, which obtained 19 contracts to supply city institutions with $1800 worth of bedding and clothing. The aldermanic investigation was ordered because of a city charter provision prohibiting any city official from having a direct or indirect interest in any city contract.

Alderman Hoeflinger said he had lost his office and financial interest in the Standard company four years ago, asserting he had identified himself as secretary-treasurer of the company during his campaign two years ago "to make myself look big." More recent references to the company as "my firm," he said, were the result of habit.

Lowest Bid, Roach Says.

Although no longer an officer of the company, he said he was employed as a salesman. He emphasized his statement that he had had nothing to do with the city contracts, however. Supply Commissioner Roach declared Hoeflinger never had discussed city contracts with him and said the business had been awarded the Standard company because its bids were lowest.

The "M. A. Klein Clothing Co." is not listed in city or telephone directories. However, the printed billheads on file in Comptroller Nolte's office give its address as 4019 Chouteau avenue, the office of the Standard Company and the business address given by Hoeflinger in the Board of Aldermen's roster.

M. A. Klein is president of the Standard Company and gave a receipt for checks in payment for that company's orders at the Comptroller's office. These checks bore the stamped indorsement of the Standard Company.

The name "M. A. Klein," also appears on the receipt showing eight checks had been turned over for goods supplied by the "M. A. Klein Clothing Co." These checks are indorsed in ink, "M. A. Klein Clothing Co.," and in each instance bear a subsequent stamped indorsement, "Standard Clothing & Tailoring Co."

"Never Heard of Company."

However, Michael A. Klein, reached at 4019 Chouteau avenue today, identified himself as president of the Standard Clothing & Tailoring Co., said the company had not changed its name and repeatedly asserted he had no knowledge of the "M. A. Klein Clothing Co."

When told that such a concern had successfully bid and received orders for supplies to city institutions, he declared: "There must be some mistake. I never heard of such a company."

The last of its orders was delivered by the Standard Company Dec. 12, and the first delivery by the "M. A. Klein Clothing Co." on record was Dec. 13. Its last order on which a check was issued was Jan. 10.

BOTH DRIVERS IN COLLISION FINED $250 IN POLICE COURT

Each Testifies Other Was Intoxicated; Crash at Vandeventer and Olive.

Robert Toboll, 3048 Rolla place, and Richard Williams, 3922 Folsom avenue, were fined $250 each by Police Judge Simpson today for careless driving and destruction of property in connection with an accident in which their automobiles figured Dec. 23 at Vandeventer avenue and Olive street.

Each testified the other was intoxicated and approached the intersection at high speed. Toboll charged also that Williams' machine had no lights and that his car was knocked across the sidewalk on the northeast corner, breaking a drug store window. Both men were knocked unconscious by the accident. The Court held both drivers were negligent.

Taking Oath as U. S. Circuit Judge

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

JUDGE CHARLES B. FARIS,

WITH hand on the family Bible, taking the oath of office as Judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in his courtroom today.

JUDGE FARIS SWORN IN FOR APPELLATE COURT

Takes Oath Before Gathering of Lawyers, Close Friends and Federal Officials.

Judge Charles B. Faris was sworn in today as a Judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Eighth Circuit. The oath was administered by his colleague on the District Court bench here, Judge Charles B. Davis, in District Courtroom No. 1, over which Judge Faris has presided for 15 years. The room was filled with lawyers, personal friends and heads of Federal offices and bureaus.

At the outset of the ceremony, Judge Faris sent a telegram to President Roosevelt, resigning from the District Court bench. Judge Faris, who passed the retirement age of 70 in October, was appointed to the Appellate Court by the President on recommendation of Senator Bennett C. Clark. It has been stated in official circles in Washington that Judge Faris is expected to retire after a year's service on the appellate bench, and that Seth Thomas of Iowa will then be appointed to the Court of Appeals.

For the vacancy on the District Court bench, Senator Clark has indorsed George H. Moore, former Collector of Internal Revenue, and the names of Circuit Judges William C. Hughes of Montgomery City and Robert I. Cope of Poplar Bluff have been put forward.

In taking the oath, Judge Faris used a family Bible, taken to court by Mrs. Faris, which was more than 100 years old, and which contained a bookmark embroidered by the Judge's stepmother, when she was a girl, more than a century ago.

District Attorney Harry Blanton made the first of several congratulatory speeches, expressing pleasure that Judge Faris had been promoted, and regret that the bar and the public would lose him from the local bench.

Fred L. Williams, who served with Judge Faris on the bench of the Missouri Supreme Court, said he knew "what our Presidents perhaps have not known, that Judge Faris possesses ideal talents for an appellate judge." Edward J. White, counsel for the Missouri Pacific trustees, said that in 30 years' judicial service, Judge Faris had been "beyond suspicion." Walter H. Davis, former assistant district attorney, praised Judge Faris' integrity and his legal ability. John A. Hope, Referee in Bankruptcy, told of an acquaintance which began when the Judge was Prosecuting Attorney of Pemiscot County.

Judge Faris, after thanking the courtroom gathering, said: "I shall miss the hurly-burly of the District Court, after I have gone into the sanctuary of the Court of Appeals, where henceforth I am to be cloistered, cabineted and cribbed."

ON TRIAL FOR MURDER IN BEER FLAT HOLDUP

Testimony in the trial of Harry Jerrold for first-degree murder in the killing of Carl J. Schlueter in an attempted beer-flat holdup Feb. 12, 1932, began today before a jury in Circuit Judge Connor's court.

Jerrold was charged jointly with Jess Hedger for the killing of Schlueter and Henry J. Pohlman in the basement establishment at 1403 South Vandeventer avenue. Hedger, convicted in the case and sentenced to life imprisonment last May, has been adjudged insane and is in the State Hospital at Fulton.

Assistant Circuit Attorney Robert Y. Woodward, in his opening statement, said the tSate would ask that Jerrold be sentenced to life imprisonment. He said testimony would show that Jerrold stood guard at the door of the flat, grappled with a man in the place and fled with Hedger after the shooting.

Woodward also said he wolud nitroduc ea statement Jerrold made to police admitting participation in the crime.

The first witness was Herman Schlueter, brother of the dead man, who said he lived at the place at the time, with Carl and with Tony Schmidt and Hugo Hoff, both of whom were in the place when the robbers entered.

Describing the occurrence, which took place about 7 o'clock in the evening, Schlueter said his first knowledge of the holdup was after Hoff went to a lavatory in the back of the place. Looking up, the witness said, he saw a man with a pistol approaching him from the direction Hoff had gone.

DOCTOR TESTIFIES GRIEF UPSET MIND OF CAMPBELL HEIR

Hazlett Campbell Said to Have Suffered From Dementia Praecox Since Father's Death in 1879.

Hazlett Campbell, 77-year-old invalid, possessor of a $1,750,000 estate, and lifetime heir to the income from the $1,250,000 estate of his brother, Hugh Campbell, has suffered from dementia praecox since the death of his father, 55 years ago, according to testimony given today by his physician, Dr. Herbert L. Montague and Dr. William Nelson.

Dr. Montague, testifying before Circuit Judge Ryan, said Hazlett Campbell had never recovered from the shock occasioned by the death, in 1879, of his father, Robert Campbell, fur trader and pioneer merchant. He said Hazlett had never been told of the death of his brother, Hugh, which occurred in 1931. Hugh Campbell's will leaves his estate to Yale University after Hazlett's death.

A contest suit against Hugh Campbell's will is on trial, and a detailed account of Hazlett Campbell's condition and his daily routine has been given by Allen C. Orrick, co-trustee of his property, Miss Mary Boerste, housekeeper for 30 years in the old family home at 1508 Locust street, and the physicians.

Doctor Tells of Daily Calls.

Dr. Montague, a general practitioner, said he called daily on Hazlett Campbell. He said he had been asked by Hugh Campbell to make daily calls, and that when he said that was not necessary, Hugh insisted that he come daily. Since Hugh Campbell's death, he has continued this routine as a matter of duty.

Originally, he said, Hazlett Campbell required treatment for a bad heart condition, caused, as the physician believed, by running up and down the stairs of the old home. Now that he remains upstairs, the heart condition is easier. He suffered a paralytic stroke in 1924, which affected the vocal cords, rendering him speechless.

Asked as to his patient's mental state, Dr. Montague said:

"Hugh would never say that there was anything wrong mentally, but I learned that he had taken his brother to specialists all over Europe, trying to improve his mental condition, without effect.

"I learned that Hazlett had been normal in boyhood, and that the trouble developed after the death of his father in 1879. This caused a shock from which he never recovered. In later years, while he was still able to speak, he would occasionally say, "My father's death"—He never spoke at any length. He seems to recognize some things that are said, but never tries to express anything."

Asked as to the effect of Hugh Campbell's death on Hazlett, the physician said, "He has never been told of it. If he knows of it, it is only because he no longer sees Hugh."

Dr. Nelson On Stand.

Dr. Nelson, a psychiatrist and neurologist, told of an examination of Hazlett Campbell, made by him Jan. 17, and of his inquiry into the history of the case. He gave the diagnosis of dementia praecox, which he said made the individual unwilling to face the world, and caused withdrawal from society. At one time, he was informed, Hazlett Campbell would go about the house unclad, and would sleep on the floor, being kept in bed only with difficulty. He said the patient had sufficient intelligence to look at objects in the room which he mentioned, and to nod a response to some simple questions.

Attorney Orrick and Miss Boerste told yesterday how the aged man, living in an upstairs bedroom and sitting rooms, sits and looks out at the traffic; how he listens to radio music, beating time; how he watches moving pictures, projected by a portable apparatus on a screen in the bedroom; how he looks sometimes at illustrated papers or newspaper comic pages.

"For many years," Orrick testified, "he has not been normal, but before the stroke, he would often talk rationally. He still recognizes me when I call, and will raise himself in bed and extend his hand. He is not confined in the sense of being restrained, but he is unable to do more than get about his room, and I have not seen him downstairs in 30 years."

JUDGE HAS FOOT TICKLED IN COURT TO SHOW INJURY

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 6.—Superior Judge Francis J. Heney took off his shoes and socks in Federal Court yesterday and stretched himself on his back on a table before the jury while a physician tickled the sole of his left foot to determine whether he ever had suffered a disturbance of the motor nerve centers. If the toes turned down the reaction was normal and healthy, but if they turned up, a disturbed nervous system was indicated, the jury was told.

The judge's toes not only turned up but the right foot reacted to the left foot being tickled, showing, it was said, the disturbance was on the right side.

The experiment was performed in support of the judge's contention that he suffered serious effects from exposure one cold night when he was put off the train at Banning instead of Palm Springs, his destination. He is suing the Pullman Co. for $50,000, asserting he suffered partial paralysis of the right side.

RAY HAMILTON, OUTLAW, MAKES SURRENDER OFFER

Gunman Under Death Sentence Says He Will Accept Prison Term if His Life Is Spared.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., Feb. 6.—Raymond Hamilton, fugitive bank robber and gunman, offered today to surrender to Federal authorities and accept a long term in Alcatraz Island prison, provided they would save him from death in the electric chair for murder. The offer was made through his brother, Floyd, arrested late yesterday in Shreveport, La. United States District Attorney Clyde Eastus promptly turned down the offer.

The Hamilton brothers escaped under fire from a police trap at a Dallas apartment Monday night. Officers fired about 200 shots at them. Raymond Hamilton is still at large.

Returned From Shreveport.

Floyd Hamilton, brought back to Dallas today from Shreveport, was subjected to a long questioning by Eastus and Federal agents. He was captured on a bus.

Floyd Hamilton was seated in the bus directly behind the driver's seat when Deputy Sheriffs Bert Stone and Will Prudhomme of Caddo parish (Shreveport), who were making a routine observation of passengers, noticed him inside.

They stepped in quickly, put pistols to his side, and said, "come on, Floyd."

Hamilton's hand shot up.

"Don't shoot," he cried, "I haven't got a gun."

The officers commanded him to walk out, with his hands still raised, and searched him. They found no weapons. Then they marched him up the street to the courthouse jail.

Money Hidden in Clothes.

Officers found $400 in bills and almost $100 in silver on him when he was searched at the jail. Most of the money was concealed in his shoes, socks and trouser legs.

He denied that he participated Monday in a Carthage (Tex.) bank robbery which was attributed to him and his brother. The money found on him had been given to him by his brother, he said.

Officers found a partly used bottle of iodine on Floyd Hamilton and also found a wound—apparently caused by a bullet—in his left forearm a few inches below the elbow. He declined to say how he had incurred the injury, but insisted it was not a bullet wound and said he was not in Dallas Monday night.

Until two weeks ago Floyd Hamilton worked at Lewis, La., wheer his father is employed. He was on the way to see his father, although he bought a ticket to Vivian, six miles beyond.

Search for Brother Goes On.

The search for Raymond Hamilton continued here. Police announced that blood stains had been found at shoulder height in the driver's seat of the truck which he stole and then abandoned in his getaway. Other stains were on the cushion and floor board.

BILL TO ABOLISH UTILITY HOLDING FIRMS IN 5 YEARS

Rayburn Explains Measure Giving Companies 'Reasonable Period' to Dissolve Voluntarily.

PRESENTED AFTER WHITE HOUSE TALK

Control by Securities Commission Provided to Simplify Structures, Restrict Investments.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Legislation to abolish public utility holding companies at the end of five years was introduced today by Chairman Rayburn (Dem.), Texas, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

Although the measure was not an "administration" bill in the usual sense, it was offered after a White House conference yesterday, and Mr. Roosevelt knew of its contents.

The legislation, as explained by Rayburn, would:

1. Simplify holding company structures and eliminate geographically and economically unrelated properties from their setups.

2. Confine holding company investments to public utility activities by excluding all extraneous or speculative ventures.

3. Control future security issues and acquisitions "to prevent further growth of pyramided structures and economically unsound systems."

4. Require adequate reports and standard accounts to bare financial condition and intercorporate relationships.

5. Eliminate common control of electric utility properties and interstate gas transmission and of domestic and foreign properties.

6. Establish the principle that a holding company shall not profit from dealings with its own subsidiaries and that service and other companies be organized on "a truly mutual and co-operative basis and shall perform their work at cost."

7. Impose rigid control of intercorporate relations "wherever there is an absence of arm's-length dealing."

8. Effect "necessary reorganizations of holding companies under Federal administrative control."

"Compulsory Dissolution."

In a statement, Rayburn cited holding company practices which he said created problems "national in scope."

"As an immediate program, therefore," he announced, "I am offering a bill which is intended to accomplish the compulsory dissolution, under the trusteeship of the Securities and Exchange Commission, of public utility holding companies which have not been voluntarily dissolved within a reasonable period of time."

"Federal legislation to eliminate the holding company is necessary to supplement state legislation, to make it effective in action and workable in practice," Rayburn said.

"The holding company has obstructed the regulatory mechanism of the states, and even where state action is theoretically possible, intercorporate relationships deprive state action of practical effect. The problem must be dealt with comprehensively ...... it will not do to appear to outlaw abusive practices revealed by the holding company device only to permit their reappearance in more subtle forms.

Says Program Will Take Time.

"The problem is difficult. Complicated corporate structures cannot be simplified and reshaped overnight. But an adequate and courageous beginning must be made immediately for dealing with the diverse and complicated aspects of utility holding company problems, with the definite objective of eliminating the holding company within a reasonable period of time and with the minimum dislocation of investment."

BILL TO OUTLAW SPLIT TICKET

Missouri House Members Would Disenfranchise Violators.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 6.—A bill making it a misdemeanor to vote a "split" ticket in a general election was introduced in the House today by Representative Bowling, Democrat, of Schuyler County. The measure provides that in order for a voter to vote the ticket of a certain party in a primary election, he must have voted for all the nominees of that party at the preceding general election. He must also sign an affidavit that he will vote for all the nominees of that party at the next general election.

Failure to comply with the provisions of this law would be punished by the disenfranchisement of the voter for a five-year period.

Town Sees Its First Automobile.

By the Associated Press.

ELSAS, Ont., Feb. 6.—This lumbering hamlet, 170 miles northwest of Sudbury, today boasted its first motor vehicle today—the first automobile, in fact, that many of its adult population had ever seen. It was a truck brought in by Donald Clarke, Port Arthur timber operator.

There were 58 bidders in six divisions of the work. Low bids were as follows: For building construction, H. B. Deal & Co., $359,340, low of eight bidders, estimate, $375,000; plumbing, J. Sheehan Plumbing Co., $51,685, low of 15, estimates, $65,000; electrical wiring, S. C. Sacks, $44,900, low of 11, estimate, $40,000; elevators, Westinghouse Elevator Co., $20,515, low of four, estimate, $25,000; heating, E. P. Ambler, $57,105, low of 12, estimate, $50,000; refrigeration, Thomas J. Sheehan, $5423, low of eight, estimate, $5000.

The building, of five and six stories with 345-bed capacity, is expected to be completed in a year. The north ward, for which the Deal firm was the successful bidder, is under construction. The service building of the group has been completed and the administration building nearly so.

Tax on Bachelors Proposed.

By the Associated Press.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Feb. 6.—All unmarried men between the ages of 21 and 50 would be subject to a $6 annual tax under a measure introduced in the State Senate yesterday. Widowers would be exempt. The proceeds would go for old age pensions.

DRIVER IS INDICTED IN DEATH OF MAN HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

Louis Weinberg Named by Grand Jury After He Reports He Felt Jar in Machine.

An indictment charging leaving the scene of injury to a person was voted by the grand jury yesterday against Louis Weinberg, 1151 Walton avenue, in connection with the death of Michael Miller, who was struck by an automobile on Page boulevard, near West End avenue, Dec. 24.

Weinberg surrendered to police two days later, reporting he had passed the scene of the accident and had felt a jar, but did not know he struck anyone.

He later discovered the front axle of his car was broken and a head light dented, he said. Miller, a janitor, resided at 4545 Page.

S. S. MANDEL NAMED TRUSTEE FOR ROYAL BREWERIES, INC.

He Appears Before Referee With Power of Attorney for Group of Creditors.

Samuel S. Mandel, collection agent, was elected trustee of the bankrupt Royal Breweries, Inc., 1030 Victor street, at a meeting of the firm's creditors yesterday in Bankruptcy Court. His bond was fixed at $5000 by Referee Hope.

Mandel, who appeared at the election as a representative with power of attorney for a group of creditors, was questioned by Referee Hope as to the manner in which he had secured their business. Mandel stated many of the creditors he represented were old clients, and others had been reached by mail.

On continued questioning by Referee Hope, Mandel stated he had secured a list of the brewery's creditors from the office of the clerk of the Federal Court, and had written leters advising them to file their claims promptly and offering to prepare the claims for them.

Referee Hope dismissed the meeting and said he would look into the matter. Later in the afternoon he announced the election of Mandel.

The Royal Breweries filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy Jan. 8, after a few months' operation. Schedules showed assets of $4000 and liabilities of $10,175.

KILLED IN ACCIDENT

FUNERAL HERE TOMORROW FOR WILEY F. CORL

Services at 4 P. M. for Philadelphia Utilities Operator Killed in Fall From Moving Auto.

The funeral of Wiley F. Corl, public utility operator and former St. Louisan, who was killed yesterday when he fell from an automobile near Belleville, will be held at 4 p. m. tomorrow at Kron's mortuary, 2707 North Grand boulevard. The Rev. William Crowe, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, will officiate.

Burial will be either at Chicago or Joplin, Mo.

The accident occurred at 3:15 p. m. yesterday on Illinois Highway No. 15, five miles east of Belleville. Corl, who was 48 years old, was riding with M. D. Curran, 301 Berry road, Glendale, president of the Radiant Fuel Corporation. Evidently, Curran said, he leaned against the door latch of Curran's coach, permitting the door to fly open. He fell out, crushing his head on the concrete pavement. Curran, testifying briefly as the only witness at the Coroner's inquest, said he stopped the car in 40 feet.

A passerby helped Curran place Corl in the car. At St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Belleville, Corl was pronounced dead. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict of accident.

Corl and Curran had been on the way to West Frankfort, Ill., to see a new coking process in which the former was interested. Corl, whose home was at Villa Nova, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia, had been visiting relatives here. He formerly resided at 7230 Maryland avenue, University City.

Born in Joplin, Mo., he was graduated as an electrical engineer at the University of Missouri in 1908. He was employed then by a Chicago engineering firm and handled the electrification of coal mines in Illinois and Indiana. From 1913 to 1918 he was an officer of the Southern Illinois Light & Power Co. and from 1918 to 1923 general manager and part owner of the Missouri Utilities Co., Mexico, Mo., selling out to the North American Light & Power Co.

Made president of the Community Power and Light Co., Corl came here in 1923 to direct its extensive public utility interests in the Southwest. Control of this concern was sold early in 1926 to Stone & Webster, with a profit to Corl and associates, it was reported, of $1,000,000 or more. Thereupon Corl organized the Commonwealth Utilities Corporation here, to operate in the same field.

The United Gas Improvement Co. of Philadelphia bought the Commonwealth Utilities Corporation in 1929, paying Corl for his interest 10,000 shares of U. G. I. stock and some cash and making him a vice-president of U. G. I. He left these interests two years ago to become vice-president of Management and Engineering Corporation, a subsidiary of the Utilities Power & Light Corporation, at a salary reported to be $33,000 a year. About the same time he was made receiver of the Texas-Louisiana Power Co. For a time he was president of the Missouri Association of Public Utilities.

Surviving are Mrs. Corl, a daughter, Miss Fay Corl, attending the University of Missouri; a son, Wiley Jr., at Massachusetts Institute of Technology; two younger daughters, Dorothy and Ruth; a brother in Houston, Tex.; a sister at Oxford, O., and his mother, residing at Joplin.

HANEY WITHDRAWS CANDIDACY

THREE ARRESTED FOR DEATHS FROM POISONOUS ALCOHOL

Father and Two Sons, Indicted in Utica, N. Y., Traced to Brooklyn Apartment.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6—Salvatore di Benedetto, 42 years old, and his two sons, Philip, 19, and Michael, 22, under indictment in Utica, N. Y., in connection with poisonous alcohol deaths, were captured early today in Brooklyn after they had been traced to an apartment by Utica detectives

The three put up a fight when police broke into the apartment and several shots were fired, but no one was hurt. The elder Di Benedetto and one of the sons, Philip, attempted to escape by jumping out of a window, but were captured as they dropped to the ground.

The Benedettos, together with Mrs. Benedetto and three other children, were said by the Utica officers to have left Utica last week and to have driven to the home of friends in Brooklyn. They were traced to that place, but had gone away when police got there. Later they were traced to an apartment which Benedetto had rented Feb. 4. Three Utica detectives, accompanied by Brooklyn police, went to the apartment early today and found the entire family.

Two Hurt in Plane Crash.

PONCA CITY, Ok., Feb. 6.—The plane in which Curtis Greer, a Ponca City barber, had been taken to a hospital at Memphis earlier yesterday, crashed last night near Shidler, northwest of here, on the return trip. All live in Ponca City.

rected him to give reporters the letter dated Dec. 21, with the salutation, "Dear Bill." It follows:

"I think it is perhaps best that I should not reply officially to the resolution and action of the contention of the American Federation of Labor in regard to the appointment of Mr. Clay Williams. There is no need for any controversy over the resolution or in regard to a number of inaccuracies of fact and conclusion in the resolution.

"As you know, I appointed Clay Williams after real consideration of all the public and private interests affected and on the basis of my personal knowledge of his qualifications.

"Since his appointment, he has rendered a devoted, impartial service which has fully justified his selection. I think that as time goes on the Federation will agree with me on all of this."

Letters Exchanged by Roosevelt And Counsel for A. F. of L.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.

FOLLOWING is the letter of President Roosevelt to Charlton Ogburn, counsel for the American Federation of Labor, and the letter of Ogburn which preceded that of the President:

President's Letter.

My Dear Mr. Ogburn—Your letter of Jan. 28 and communications along the same line, to which you refer, place a construction upon the creation, powers and functioning of the Automobile Labor Board, with which I cannot agree. The board was established by the Government and not as a board of arbitration, created by the parties to an agreement.

There was in March, 1934, the possibility of a strike in this industry, arising out of controversies particularly concerning the right of employes to organize freely for collective bargaining. The "principles of settlement" at that time recognized, not only the possibility, but the probability that groups of employes in this industry might choose different representatives or organizations to act in their behalf. Provision was made for the NRA to set up a "board responsible to the President of the United States," and in the "principles of settlement," it was stated that "the Government makes it clear that it favors no particular union or particular form of employe organization or representation."

The board established by the Government was, therefore, created for the benefit of all employers and employes in the industry and to prevent discrimination against any employe who exercised his right freely to designate his representatives for collective bargaining.

Responsible to President.

The board so established is responsible to the President and it is for the President to determine whether the board is fulfilling its duties and how long the existence of the board should be continued. The board was not established in the code; but it will be noted that the authority under which the board and the code were both established expires June 16, 1935.

In the original creation of the board there was no provision for the nomination of members of the board by anyone and in accepting advice, or giving to persons an opportunity to suggest selections, the Government did not give to anyone a right to name members or otherwise to determine the membership of the board.

At the present time the board is not only functioning to prevent discrimination against employes and otherwise to carry out the purposes of its creation, but it is engaged also in the very important work of holding elections, whereby through secret ballot, under Government supervision, all employes are being given a full and fair opportunity to designate their representatives, choosing them either as individuals, or as representatives of a labor organization. The result of these elections must be to provide for the first time conclusive evidence of how and by whom the employes desire to be represented.

What Balloting Shows.

When these elections are completed, the freely chosen representatives of the employes will be able to associate themselves together to bargain collectively, or otherwise to represent the interests of their constituents. Thereby both the employers and the Government will be able to determine the wishes of the employes and will be assured that those who claim to represent the employes and their wishes are, in fact, their duly designated and authorized representatives.

Under these circumstances, it would seem that any organization of employes in this industry, or any organization claiming to represent such employes, would avail itself fully of the opportunity to establish the authentic character of its representation.

From the reports of recent balloting in the elections now being held, it appears clearly that all but a very small percentage of the employes are availing themselves of this opportunity. If the Government should, at this time, annul or impair the power of the Automobile Labor Board to conduct these elections, it would be placed in the position of preventing the employes from voting, instead of fulfilling its promise to afford them a full and fair opportunity to exercise this right.

Very sincerely yours,
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Ogburn's Letter to Roosevelt.

You are acquainted with the reasons for the withdrawal by the American Federation of Labor from the automobile settlement of March 15, last. These reasons were made clear to you in a letter sent to you at Hyde Park Sept. 11, 1934, by President Green of the American Federation of Labor with the accompanying resolutions adopted Aug. 31 by the National Council of Automobile Workers. The reasons for this withdrawal were given you in my letter to you of Dec. 19, and were reiterated in the public announcement made by Mr. Green (president of A. F. of L), through the press on the 24th instant, which had heretofore been withheld.

You are thus familiar with our construction of the settlement of March 25, which is that this was an agreement between the parties to the controversy then threatening a strike, to wit, the automobile manufacturers and the American Federation of Labor. Your successful mediation of this controversy resulted in the announcement by you of the terms of settlement accepted by both sides, one of the terms of which included the appointment of a board with limited jurisdiction—one a labor representative, another an industry representative, and a neutral chairman, all to be appointed by the NRA. The labor representative was selected by the American Federation of Labor Federal Labor Unions, as parties to the agreement, the industry member by the manufacturers, as parties to the agreement, and the chairman was designated by the NRA. The announcement of the settlement made by you and the appointment of the board were not done under your executive order.

Analogy in Union Contracts.

An analogy is found in many union contracts with employers under which both sides agree to leave unsettled issues to an arbitration board composed of one member representing the union, one representing the employer, and an impartial chairman to be appointed by a Federal District Judge who, if he accepts the task, thus becomes responsible for the appointment. Such an arbitration board, however, is not a judicial board or creature of the court.

You are thoroughly familiar with our view that since this agreement was without duration of time, either party could withdraw by giving notice to the other party. Before the ending of the agreement by such withdrawal all decisions and rulings of the board within its jurisdiction are binding on the two parties.

This withdrawal is in no sense an abrogation of the agreement, but is a perfectly legal manner of ending it. Had the agreement been for a fixed duration of time, we would have necessarily awaited the expiration date.

The Automobile Labor Board thus had no legal status except under this agreement of the two parties. The withdrawal of one party from the agreement, thus bringing the agreement to an end, naturally terminates the existence of the board.

Issues in Acute Stage.

During the period of uncertainty pending the public announcement of the withdrawal of the American Federation of Labor from this settlement, serious controversies under section 7 (A) of the Recovery Act have been accumulating in the automobile industry, some of them in their nature outside of the limited jurisdiction of the Automobile Labor Board.

These issues are pressing for settlement; some are in an acute stage. The automobile labor problem is today by far the most serious labor problem in America. The facts adduced by the recent NRA investigation of the automobile industry under your order demonstrates this fact.

Automobile workers have the same rights as all other workers in coded industries to self-organization guaranteed them in section 7 (A) of the Recovery Act, and to have their controversies under section 7 (A) submitted to the National Labor Relations Board for investigation and findings of fact, pending a determination by you of whether a special impartial board should be appointed for the automobile industry with full powers. The exercise of the jurisdiction by the National Labor Relations Board will, I am sure, relieve the present tension, which is extremely grave.

Mr. Green's statement and my letter to you of Dec. 19, regarding the disappointing record of the Automobile Labor Board and its unwarranted ordering of elections among employes without the consent and against the wishes of organized labor, make it clear why the personnel of this board, regardless of other factors, render it completely unacceptable to organized labor.

INJUNCTION AGAINST UNION LONGSHOREMEN IN NEW YORK

With Truck Workers They Are Enjoined From Interfering With Cargoes.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Union longshoremen and truckmen were restrained from interfering with the free movement of cargo along New York's waterfront in an injunction order signed by Supreme Court Justice Burt J. Humphrey in Long Island City, yesterday.

The threat of a strike was apparently averted temporarily by the action of Justice Humphrey in staying the injunction pending an appeal.

Union leaders had feared the "rank and file" would force a strike in protest against the injunction. Some 20,000 truckmen walked out a week ago in a one-day protest against the jurist's announced intention to sign the order. Edward C. Maguire, counsel for the unions, said the Appellate Division would be asked to hear the appeal as an emergency measure.

M. J. WHALEN, VETERAN OF CITY POLITICS, DIES

Democratic Committeeman Succumbs to Blood Poisoning From Sore Throat.

Michael J. Whalen, member of the Democratic City Committee and long active in that party's councils, died this afternoon at De Paul Hospital of septic blood poisoning which followed a sore throat. He was 57 years old.

Whalen, who in recent years represented the Twenty-Second Ward on the City Committee, went to the hospital Jan. 20 when the infection developed.

Not long before he became ill his home at 4872 St. Louis avenue was badly damaged by fire, and he moved with his family to the Northwestern Hotel, 4919 Natural Bridge avenue. His wife and daughter, who survive, now live there.

Whalen was a member of the old House of Delegates and was one of the Democratic party workers known as "Butler's Indians" years ago, when Col. Ed Butler was the Democratic boss of St. Louis.

In recent years, having lost some of his enthusiasm for politics because, as he said, "the people now do most of the voting," Whalen was fond of telling stories of his earlier days as a ward worker. He related that in his ward they held the ballot boxes until information was received on how many votes would be needed for candidates of the organization. His ward, he said, could always be depended on to deliver the required votes.

Until about 1924 Whalen was in the commission business in the 900 block on North Fourth street. The following year he joined with other St. Louisans and George Remus, then known as "king of the bootleggers," in buying the Jack Daniel Distillery Warehouse in St. Louis from Lem Motlow of Lynchburg, Tenn.

Whalen, who had put up $28,000 of the $135,000 paid for the warehouse, was indicted subsequently at Indianapolis on a Federal charge of defrauding the Government by illegal removal of 30,000 gallons of whisky taken from the warehouse and distributed through bootleg channels.

One of 15 convicted on the charge, he was sentenced to two years at Leavenworth Penitentiary and fined $5000. After serving one-third of the sentence he was pardoned and paid the fine.

After his release from the penitentiary Whalen returned to political activity and was re-elected to the Democratic City Committee in 1932. He demonstrated in the election of that year that he retained much of his old political influence by carrying his ward in the Democratic primary for Russell Dearmont a candidate for Governor. William L. Igoe, also a resident of the Twenty-second Ward, worked in that election for Francis M. Wilson, who won the nomination with the backing of the Pendergast machine. Wilson died before the election and his place on the ticket was taken by Gov. Park.

In recent years Whalen acquired a stable of racing horses. A few years ago he told a friend that he was worth about $150,000 which he had invested in St. Louis real estate and stocks and bonds.

'GOOD DEMOCRAT' TALKS TOO MUCH AND GETS 30 DAYS

Impresses Judge He Is "Right" Politically; Court Decides He Is Otherwise Wrong.

Stephen Ardrey, a carpenter, 1305 North Jefferson avenue, talked himself into a 30-day workhouse sentence in Police Judge Vest's court today. Charged with peace disturbance in hitting a neighbor, Ardrey testified he was drunk and did not remember what happened.

Ardrey volunteered that he had been sentenced to 30 days in the workhouse for driving while intoxicated three years ago, but had served only 10 days "because a Democratic politician fixed it up for me—it was just before election."

"I was pretty drunk last night," he continued. "I was at the Democratic Club, and you know, Judge, there's plenty of liquor around there."

The Judge smiled. "You've always been a good Democrat?" "Yes, sir," said Ardrey emphatically.

"In that case," said the Judge, "I'll sentence you to 30 days."

PLEASE..
FOR GOD'S SAKE, GIVE ME A BREAK

This letter introduces Cynthia Carson, poignantly charming heroine of Vina Delmar's flaming new novel now beginning in Liberty—her adventures in Hollywood will carry you from pinnacle to pinnacle of breath-taking suspense.

Dear Ray:

Your messenger just arrived and I am good and sore. In the first place it is none of your business if Bruce MacDougal is coming here for dinner this evening.

I know who he is and I know my lowly position. The caste system of India hasn't got this beat one bit. I'm nobody and that makes me an untouchable in Hollywood. Also you think Bruce MacDougal is romping around because I look like just another telephone number. Ray, let me have an evening of peace and quiet with a man who isn't on the make. I'm sorry if that hurts you, but let's be honest with each other.

Look, you have your home and your little girl and your movie empire and I haven't a thing. Give me a break. You wouldn't talk about me, would you, Ray? You wouldn't say to anybody "Oh, Cynthia Carson" in that tone that a man uses when he wants to spill the beans and still be able to claim that he never kissed and told. Give me a break, Ray. And I'm not asking you to lie. I'm just asking you to keep quiet. Please, for God's sake, give me a break.

Yours,
Cynthia.

More Testimony About Fisch and His Package

of the chemical processes occurring when silver nitrate came in contact with substances in the wax of a finger print. Attorney-General Wilentz interrupted to assert the State would not contest Dr. Hudson's qualifications.

Q. When did you first become interested in the Lindbergh case? A. about March 3, through the solicitation of Justice Minturn.

Q. What did you do? A. I was asked if I could obtain finger prints from wood——

Describes Tests.

"On March 13," he recounted, "I was asked to go to Hopewell to see if I could obtain any prints from the ladder, or the baby's books and toys. I went down there. We found some finger prints of the baby on his books."

The witness told of attempting to bring out finger prints on the baby's toys and later from a section of the ladder. The day was cloudy, he added, and the violet ray lamp available to facilitate the work was small. Conditions generally were unfavorable. The next day, he added, the entire ladder was sprayed with the nitrate solution, in a search for prints.

"500 Prints on Ladder."

Q. How many prints were on the ladder? A. There were more than 500 finger prints and fragments, some of which were sufficient to be of value.

Q. How many were of value? A. I would say more than 500.

Dr. Hudson said he had not seen photographs of the ladder taken. Those available, he added, could not be associated with any particular part of the ladder, in which there was 5000 inches of surface.

Q. How long were you there with Trooper Kelly, Sergeant Kubler, processing the ladder? A. Three days; perhaps four.

Q. Were you present when the processing was finished? A. Yes.

Q. And what did you observe? A. I've already said a quantity of finger prints became visible.

The physician said he did not know how many oft he prints were identified and added further that he would consider it an uncertain job.

How Prints Sink In.

The wood of the ladder, when he first examined it, Dr. Hudson testified, was very clean, not discolored, and the nails were bright, not rusted.

The witness said that on the average type of paper prints sank in within a few hours and the powder method of detection would be ineffective.

The oils of the print, the expert added, hardened and special hard brushin gof the powder would be required to develop it to a readable extent. Prints, if not rubbed off, within a few hours, would sink into painte dsurfaces and could be brought out with his process months later.

Q. Assuming the ladder was made, built and handled by this defendant, how long would you say his fingerprints would be discoverable? A. If the ladder were kept under ordinary conditions, the fingerprints would be there at least six months afterwards, I think.

Hypothetical Question.

Q. If after you obtained several hundred fingerprints from the ladder and you did not obtain the fingerprints of this defendant, what would this indicate to you as a fingerprint chemist?

Wilentz declared the "hypothetical" question was not based on the facts and asked that the court forbid an answer. Justice Trenchard suggested that the question should include the possibility that the kidnaper wore gloves. Pope said there was no proof in the cast that the criminal wore gloves.

"I think the thing of value to get from this witness is the effect of wearing or not wearing gloves," Justice Trenchard observed. "I think some of you ought to bring it out."

Pope propounded his question again, telling the witness to discuss the effect of gloves.

"Under ordinary conditions, if the man made th eladder with his bare hands, the silver nitrate process would undoubtedly reveal his fingerprints," said Dr. Hudson. "If he wore gloves there would of course be no fingerprint impression."

He said it would be necessary for the maker of the ladder to be gloved everytime he handled it, for otherwise silver nitrate would reveal the prints he made moving it after building it.

Says Prints Remain for Year.

Q. Would the handling of the material before being put in the ladder, with the bare hands, produce prints, which would remain six months or a year.

Wilentz objected again, asserting the question did not account for all conditions affecting the wood. Justice Trenchard said an answer could be given "if ordinary conditions prevailed." Dr. Hudson asserted prints would remain on the materials six months or a year.

Dr. Hudson said that, if the beer stein in the nursery had been handled, fingerprints on it could have been deevloped five hours later.

Pope directed Dr. Hudson's attention to the so-called attic board upright on the kidnaper's ladder and asked him if he recognized it. The witness said he did.

Saw Only One Nail Hole.

Pope inquired if he had noticed any nail holes on that upright, and Hudson said he saw one square cut nail hole.

"Was your scrutiny of the upright such that if there had been more than one nail hole you have noticed it. "I would, I think."

Q. And you saw only one nail hole there? A. Yes.

The State asserted four nail holes were found in that upright and matched holes found in the floor beams of the Hauptmann attic.

ALDERMAN SLAY TO OFFER BILL FOR TAX ON OIL SOLD IN CITY

One-Cent-a-Gallon Levy Needed to Meet Relief Requirements, He Says.

A bill providing for a 1-cent-a-gallon tax on oil sold in the city will be introduced Friday by Alderman John Slay of the Seventh Ward, he said today. He thinks, he added, that the city needs the revenue for relief.

Slay replied yesterday to a letter sent out by Carl Barker, chairman of the Missouri Petroleum Industries Committee, attempting to organize opposition to Slay's bill. Barker charged that a tax of 1 cent a gallon on 6-cent fuel oil "would be equal to $1 a ton on $6 coal and 50 cents on each $3 gas bill."

Slay's reply was that the gasoline companies recently raised their prices in St. Louis "without any public hearing" and that the increase was almost 4 cents a gallon.

SHIP LINES SEEK TO LIMIT MOHAWK DISASTER LIABILITY

Claims Exceeding $1,000,000 Pending, but Operators Would Pay Only $10,000.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Confronted by claims amounting to more than $1,000,000, operators of the liner Mohawk, which sank with a loss of 45 lives off the New Jersey coast last month, sought yesterday to have their liability limited to $10,000.

In a Federal Court petition, the Atlantic Gulf & West Indies, Inc., and the New York & Cuba Mail & Steamship Co., which is popularly known as the Ward Line, said an alleged "incompetent" master of the Norwegian freighter Talisman was responsible for the disaster. The Mohawk sank after a collision with the Talisman.

INSISTS INVESTIGATION OF MOORE IS THOROUGH

Assistant to Attorney-General Denies Only Selected Group Were Seen in St. Louis.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—William Stanley, assistant to the Attorney-General, said today that the Department of Justice investigators of George H. Moore, Senator Bennett C. Clark's candidate for the St. Louis District judgeship, had not seen only a selected group of persons in St. Louis, as has been reported, but were making a thorough investigation.

However, Stanley refused to make public the names of the persons the investigators had seen, declaring that the department had never given out such confidential information and had no intention of doing so now.

Stanley is in charge of the preliminary investigation and will report to Attorney-General Cummings. As in the case with other appointments, the candidate recommended by the Attorney-General to the President will first be checked by Postmaster-General-National Chairman Farley, who has charge of administration patronage.

Stanley said that he had not yet reported to Cummings and that he did know when the recommendation would be sent to the White House.

Assistant United States Attorney-General Dan McGrath was in St. Louis last week. Judge Faris said today McGrath had called on him Saturday to pay "a friendly visit," and had not discussed Moore or the judgeship. He also called upon C. E. Vetterli, agent in charge of the Department of Justice investigation bureau here, but did not disclose the purpose of his visit, Vetterli said. Probate Judge Glendy B. Arnold said he had been told by lawyers that McGrath was here but had not seen him. Kenneth Teasdale, president St. Louis Bar Association, likewise said he had not been called upon. United States Attorney Blanton declined to discuss McGrath's visit, but said that if he had been here, he had returned to Washington.

Pair File Divorce Suits Same Day.

Mrs. Lena Stoppelworth and her husband, Walter I. Stoppelworth, 4047 Juniata street, each filed suit for divorce yesterday, alleging indignities. Her petition was filed first and shortly thereafter a suit in which he appeared as plaintiff was entered. They were married in July, 1930, and separated last Dec. 15. Stoppelworth is custodian of Horace Mann School. The law firm of E. P. & R. C Brinkman, representing Stoppelworth, was not aware of Mrs Stoppelworth's suit when his petition was filed, a member of the firm said.

SHOT BY ROBBERS

ROBERT C. LEWIS.

POLICEMAN SHOOTS AT ROBBERS IN TAVERN

Officer Forced to Run When Revolver Jams; Bartender Wounded by Holdup Man.

Covered by the revolvers of two holdup men in the Fairway Tavern at 4139 Natural Bridge avenue early today, Probationary Patrolman James D. Haney decided things had gone far enough when he and 17 other persons were told to empty their pockets and place their valuables on the bar.

Haney, in civilian attire, drew his revolver and fired four shots at one of the robbers, who was just a few feet away rifling the cash register. As he turned to meet the other, advancing toward him with drawn revolver, his service revolver jammed, due, as subsequent investigation showed, to a defective cartridge.

This left the patrolman facing the necessity of saving his life. Hurling his useless revolver at the robber, he made a dash for the front door and escaped through it unharmed, to the accompaniment of breaking glass, as the robber fired three shots at him.

When the frightened customers of the tavern emerged from cover, to which they had fled when the shooting began, they found that the bartender, Robert C. Lewis, had been shot in the left foot by a robber's bullet, that $30 had been taken from the cash register, and $5 from the tavern waiter, Paul Cottrill.

Lewis, the wounded bartender, was taken to City Hospital, where it was found that the bullet that struck him in the foot was of .32 caliber. Haney's revolver is a .38. Lewis' wound was said not to be serious.

Haney, unmarried, lives at 5211 Lansdowne avenue.

GROSS STATE INCOME TAX PROPOSAL KILLED

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 6.—A bill providing for amendment of the State Constitution to permit the levying of a gross tax on the income of individuals and business in Missouri was killed last night by the House Committee on Constitutional Amendments.

The action followed a hearing at which representatives of several educational institutions appeared in opposition to the bill.

The measure was sponsored by Representatives Detienne, of Audrain County and Herring of Howard County. It provided for a vote of the people at the 1936 general election on the question of taxing individuals one-half of 1 per cent a year on all gross income in excess of $1000. Public utilities, banks, transportation agencies, loan companies and financial companies, under the proposal, would be taxed 1 per cent a year on gross income in excess of $1000.

The revenue raised by this tax would have been apportioned as follows: $1,000,000 for the care of insane poor in the various counties and the City of St. Louis; $2,000,000 for education of which $1,500,000 would go to the University of Missouri and the remaining $500,000 to various teachers colleges throughout the State, and the remainder of the money raised to the general revenue and school funds of the State.

Detienne told the committee that all the counties and the City of St. Louis would save thousands of dollars if funds were provided to take care of the insane poor, and the educational institutions throughout the State would benefit by passage of the amendment. Several educators said, however, that imposition of the tax might lessen rather than increase the funds for public education.

The committee approved a bill which would exempt the first $750 of property held as homesteads from taxation. This proposal will also be subject to a vote of the people at the 1936 election. The measure originally provided for exemption of the first $2000, but was amended to the lower figure. Representative Fulbright of Ripley County, author of the bill, consented to the amendment explaining to reporters that he wanted the bill to be approved even if the figure had to be decreased.

A similar amendment providing that the Legislature should determine the amount to be exempted was killed by the committee, the members expressing the opinion that the amount should be stated specifically.

The commission approved a bill for another State-wide vote on the question of providing retirement funds for school teachers, part of the fund to be paid by the State and part by the teachers themselves. This question was voted on at the 1934 election but failed to carry by a narrow margin. Several teachers, mostly from Kansas City, appeared before the committee to urge favorable action on the bill.

HAMILTON-BROWN OFFICER IS FIRED AFTER TESTIMONY

R. B. Brundrett, Vice-President, Supplied Part of Data for Plaintiffs in Receivership Suit.

Ralph B. Brundrett, vice-president and treasurer of the Hamilton, Brown Shoe Co., was discharged yesterday, a day after the annual stockholders' meeting at which the controlling group within the company had strengthened its position against the minority faction seeking to put the firm in receivership.

Testimony at recent deposition hearings brought out that Brundrett, an employe of the company for 26 years, had supplied much of the data relied upon by the plaintiffs in the receivership suit, and had conferred frequently with them while the suit was in preparation.

Luke E. Hart, president of the company, declined to comment on Brundrett's dismissal. He said the board of directors would meet within two weeks to elect his successor. Brunderett was paid $4500 a year. He lives at 1221 McCausland avenue.

Brundrett testified, when his deposition was taken, that he prepared, at the instance of Hart and Alanson C. Brown, a balance sheet for last June 30, which was misleading in that it included among current assets as item of $78,000 for lasts, dies and patterns, although such equipment was set out specifically elsewhere in the statement at the nominal value of $1.

Subsequently the testimony developed that Brundrett had been keeping tab on the time Hart devoted to the affairs of the shoe company, making memoranda of the time the president reported for work and the time he left. W. Finley McElroy Jr., a plaintiff in the receivership suit, testified Brundrett told him Hart spent five or six hours a day at the office of the shoe company.

The receivership suit, which will be heard tomorrow in Circuit Court, asked that Hart, Brown and Harry L. Tomes be removed as directors of the company. They were reelected directors at the annual stockholders' meeting Monday, and their supporters won two other places on the board, leaving two places for the minority group, which had had three representatives.

LOS ANGELES GRAND JURY FINDS RELIEF FOOD UNFIT

Children Fed Rotten Apples, Wormy Cabbages Supplied at High Cost, It Reports.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6.—A charge that children of the poor have been fed on "wormy cabbages, watery potatoes, rotten apples and wet macaroni supplied to the county at high prices," was made known yesterday in a grand jury report that severely criticised the Los Angeles County General Stores Department.

This department, which spent $7,000,000 last fiscal year largely in the purchase of foodstuffs for county indigents, was accused in the report of conducting a "particularly malodorous racket."

Due to the shortness of its term, however, the jury said it was unable to take criminal action, but recommended that the Board of Supervisors discharge individuals in the department.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 6.—Without debate, the Senate today perfected a bill to reduce the charge to counties for care of patients in the State sanitorium at Mount Vernon.

The present charge is $7.50 weekly for each patient. The bill, by Senators McDowell and Joffee, would reduce the charge to $7.50 monthly.

The bill will be called up for final passage within the next few days. It is the first bill perfected by the Senate.

UNION CALLS STRIKE AT GARMENT PLANT

Demands 150 Workers Be Reinstated by Forest City Manufacturing Co.

A strike of garment workers was called today at the Forest City Manufacturing Co., 1627 Washington avenue, by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, which is demanding the reinstatement of 150 union employes, who went on strike in July, 1933, and were not taken back when the dispute was settled the following December.

Union members and sympathizers gathered in front of the plant at 7 a. m., and remained in the vicinity an hour and a half. Police squads, rushed to the scene, were cheered derisively and workers were jostled as they hurried across the sidewalk to the entrance. The demonstration, in general, was good-natured and no one was injured. Many of those taking part were union employes of other plants, who reported late for work.

Nine Persons Arrested.

Six women and three men, strike sympathizers, were arrested and booked at Carr Street Police Station for investigation.

Although union leaders said the strike would be extended to the company's Collinsville plant, there was no demonstration there this morning. Max Landau, Collinsville plant manager, said the 150 employes now required had reported for work. There were no pickets in front of the plant.

The St. Louis plant was also in production, officials of the company stating that no regular employes had walked out. Simon Spitzer, vice-president and treasurer of the company, denied there had been any discrimination against union employes, or that the company had refused to take back strikers at the conclusion of the previous trouble. The plant employes about 400 workers, the majority women.

Wage Increase Sought.

In addition to demanding the reinstatement of workers, the union is asking a wage increase with a guaranteed sale, a union shop, establishment of a price committee to settle piece work rates, and discontinuance of an alleged "spy system" among employes.

Meyer Perlstein, direct representative for the Garment Workers' Union, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, said the strike would be continued indefinitely with lawful picketing. A Circuit Court injunction, made permanent last December, ordered garment workers to refrain from disturbances and unlawful picketing at the Forest City plant.

The union, which has been organizing secretly in the Forest City plants here and in Collinsville, claims a majority of the workers as members.

360-MILE SCENIC ROAD IN MISSOURI PROPOSED

Plan for State Office Building Also to Be Discussed With PWA Officials.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 6.—Recommendations for construction of a 360-mile scenic drive in Missouri and a $500,000 State office building near the capitol here will be discussed with Public Works Administration officials in St. Louis today by the State Planning Board.

The recommendation for the scenic drive has been approved by the National Park Service and submitted to the National Resources Board.

The proposed drive would extend from St. Louis to the Lake of the Ozarks region, and to Clinton, where it would merge with Highway No. 35 to complete the route to Kansas City. From Clinton, a branch of the route would be constructed to Lake Taneycomo and the proposed Table Rock dam site.

The office building proposal has the indorsement of Gov. Park and other State officials. State officials contend it would be cheaper to construct an office building than to pay rent for numerous boards and bureaus now housed in office buildings.

MENINGITIS OUTBREAK IN CITY LODGING HOUSE

Two Transients Have Died and Others Are Under Treatment.

A serious outbreak of meningitis has occurred among the 850 transients at the Municipal Lodging House, 2207 Chestnut street, Health Commissioner Bredeck said today.

Two of the men have died, he added, and five others are under treatment at Isolation Hospital. Others, who have complained of being ill, are isolated at the lodging house until diagnosis of their ailment is completed.

"Crowding is one of the reasons for the outbreak," said Bredeck, "but if you send the men elsewhere, they are not much better off. The death rate is very high in these cases, but so few have been afflicted that I would not call it an epidemic. The first case was noted early in January. We have nurses at the lodging house now, to check the temperatures of all the men there who do not feel well."

Dr. John Eschenbrenner, superintendent of the Isolation Hospital, said there were two other cases of meningitis at the hospital at present. A total of seven cases at this time of year is not unusual, he said.

Health Department records show there have been 16 cases, including seven deaths from meningitis since Jan. 1. In 1934 there were 36 cases and 13 deaths.

HIGHER PAY FOR LEGISLATORS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 6.—The Senate Committee on Elections last night reported favorably a joint and concurrent resolution which would submit to the voters at the November, 1936, election a constitutional amendment to fix the pay of Missouri legislators at $1500 a year, or $3000 for the biennum.

The legislators now receive $5 a day for the first 70 days of a session, and thereafter $1 a day. A constitutional amendment to fix the pay at $1000 a year was defeated at the election of last November. The resolution was introducd by Senators Lewis and Doran of St. Louis and Senator Joffee of Kansas City. The present pay schedule has been in force since 1875.

Quintuplets' Mother in Chicago

MRS. OLIVA DIONNE.

$47,000 Jewel Robbery.

By the Associated Press.

PASADENA, Cal., Feb. 6. — The management of the Huntington Hotel reported to police yesterday that thieves had stolen more than $47,000 worth of jewelry from their guests, Sir and Lady H. Montague Allen, Montreal, and Mr. and Mrs. Lindley C. Morton, Birmingham, Ala. Stephen Royce, hotel manager, said the robberies were committed Friday. The Canadian reported loss of jewels valued at $6115 and Morton said he lost diamond rings, necklaces and earrings insured for $41,250.

CHICAGO LIKE DREAM TO MRS. DIONNE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—Mrs. Oliva Dionne, at 26 the mother of quintuplets and five other children, has adjusted herself to the almost constant bustle about her, after being literally swept off her feet by Chicago's welcoming reception.

A simple country woman, who became the world's most widely known mother, Mrs. Dionne, came out of her Canadian north woods in a plain home-made brown crepe dress to be housed in a suite in the Congress Hotel where several Presidents of the United States have stayed. Since her arrival she has been rushed here and there, with theatrical producers ringing her telephone.

Mrs. Dionne has little to say, and that in French only. She rebels now and then at the ultra sterilized 1935 way of raising babies as practiced in the skillful care of the quintuplets by Dr. Allen Dafoe and two nurses. However, she takes the routine cheerfully, it was ascertained from Mrs. Joseph Rochon of North Bay, Ontario, a cousin of her husband and a member of the Dionne traveling party.

Bewildered at Times.

It was with courage that the shy, diffident Callander, Ont., mother, whose longest railroad trip was her honeymoon journey to Ottawa in 1925, faced photographers' flash lights, the flood of reportorial questions, the awe-inspiring equipment of movie reels.

Her brown eyes at times mirror bewilderment amid chattering, inquisitive strangers addressing her in a strange tongue. Now and then she flashes an odd half-smile at her slim, equally quiet husband.

At times she gives the impression that it is just a dream that she today is to shop in some of the country's biggest department stores, the like of which she has never seen, for toys, for clothes, including a dinner dress, if one can be found that isn't "too low."

Vaudeville Contract Signed.

A vaudeville booking agent who brought the Canadian pair to Chicago, announced they had signed a contract to appear in Detroit and Michigan theaters on Feb. 14 and 15. He said they also were ready to sign a similar agreement for appearance on the stage of a Chicago movie house beginning next Friday, and were considering extending their tour to Cleveland.

Because of an understanding approved by the Canadian Government, they will be "guests" of the theaters and will limit their activities to personal appearances, with no acting or speeches required.

ANOTHER COAL TRAIN BOMBED; BRAKEMAN HURT

By the Associated Press.

WALTONVILLE, Ill., Feb. 6. — A Chicago, Burlington & Quincy train was bombed south of here last night and three empty cars blown off the track. Otis Atchison, brakeman, of Centralia, was injured slightly.

Sheriff Claude Mitchell of Jefferson County said the bombing was undoubtedly the result of factional mine trouble.

The bombing was the sixteenth of its nature in Illinois since last August. Several have occurred in this vicinity.

Mitchell said the battery used in setting off the bomb was examined for fingerprints, but whoever handled it had worn gloves. As in previous train bombings, he said, the work was timed so that the bombers could be miles away from the scene when the blast occurred.

The train was on the way into the Southern Illinois coal fields. The explosion did not cause the engine to leave the track, but about 150 feet of rails were torn up.

BILL TO CHANGE METHOD OF NAMING POSTMASTERS

Senator O'Mahoney Would Permit Filling of Larger Offices From Country at Large.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6. — The traditional method of appointing postmasters would be abolished under a bill introduced today by Senator O'Mahoney (Dem.), Wyoming.

O'Mahoney's bill would place the appointment of postmasters under the Civil Service law and permit the selection of postmasters for offices having annual gross receipts of a million dollars or more, from the country at large.

Senator O'Mahoney, former First Assistant Postmaster-General, said under his bill only Civil Service employes of the postal system who had served in supervisory capacities or as Postoffice Inspectors, postmasters of first-class offices who have had at least four years' actual experience and executives of broad experience in private life would be qualified for selection as postmasters in the $1,000,000 offices.

Teachers' College Bill Offered.

DIZZY DEAN WANTS TO BE TRADED IF TERMS ARE NOT MET

PAUL DEAN, IN HOT SPRINGS, DECLARES HE'S NOT A HOLDOUT

Parmelee Signs; Giants' Pitching Staff Is Complete

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.
By the Associated Press.

THE New York Giants' pitching staff for the 1935 campaign was completed yesterday with the announcement by Manager Bill Terry of the receipt of a signed contract from Roy Parmelee.

The Brooklyn Dodgers came up with another signed player —Bob Logan, left-handed pitcher purchased from the Indianapolis club last September for a sizeable lump of cash.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—A new angle developed yesterday in the Dizzy Dean "holdout" situation when the Cardinal pitcher suggested that he would like either to be sold or traded if he failed to come to salary terms with the Cardinals.

The Cardinals have offered Dizzy $17,500 for the 1935 season and Dean wants $25,000. According to published reports Dean is willing to be sold or traded to any club, with the exception of the Boston Braves or the Phillies, that is willing to pay him $25,000.

Cardinal officials were not inclined to take this latest development seriously although they made no comment.

Bill Terry, Manager of the New York Giants, laughed off the suggestion that he had made or contemplated making an offer for Dean at this time.

Paul Dean Denies He Is Not Satisfied.

By the Associated Press.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Feb. 6.—Denying reports that he had joined his brother, Dizzy, as a St. Louis holdout, Paul Dean, younger and more silent member of the Cardinals' ball tossing brother act, indicated yesterday that both probably would be "in there" for the Cardinals again this season.

Advised of a report stating he had become a holdout, Daffy said. "This is the first I know anything about it."

Paul added that he had "come to terms" with the St. Louis management, but declined to say that he had actually signed his 1935 contract.

"As far as I am concerned the matter is closed," Paul said.

Commenting on his brother's reported holdout for $25,000 salary, Paul said he believes everything will be straightened out within a few days.

The "Diz," who was reported to be in New York, will come here Thursday, Paul said.

The report in St. Louis indicated Paul had rejected a tendered contract for $8500. Last season he received $3000.

Pabs Win From Olympics, 35-24, In Muny League

The St. Louis Pabs, champions of Division No. 1 of the Men's Municipal Basketball League, today are awaiting the post-season title series. Last night at the Sherman Park Community Center the Pabs completed their group schedule, winning from the Olympics, 35—24, in an exciting contest that drew the best crowd of the season, 2100, despite the fact nothing was at stake.

Bill Panos and Herman Mueller led the Pabs to their eighth victory while Hamilton Card kept the hard-trying Olympics in the game by scoring five field goals.

Tonight an attempt will be made to rung down the curtain on Division No. 2 of the Men's Muny, but it is possible the Golubs and the North St. Louis Turners will win and continue their deadlock for first place. In this case a play-off contest will be necessary, thus delaying the start of the inter-division series.

The Golubs play the Triple A's tonight in the 8 o'clock game and the Turners meet the Young Democratic Club.

INDUSTRIAL QUINTETS PLAY EIGHT CONTESTS

Eight games will be played in the Y. M. C. A. Industrial Basketball League at the Armory, Grand boulevard and Market street, tonight. In Division No. 1, on the South court, Fouke Fur meets Purina Mills in the first game at 7:30; Baker Shoes and J. C. Penney will play at 8:30, and at 9:30 Wagner Electric will tackle the Olympic team of the Municipal League.

In Division No. 2 Wabash and Missouri Pacific clash at 8 o'clock, while the United States Engineers will play McQuay-Norris at 9. This will complete the schedule of this division.

Rawlings will meet Stix, Baer & Fuller at 7:30 p. m., in the first game of Division No. 3. Wohl Shoe plays Monsanto Chemical at 8:30 and Brown Shoe plays Laclede-Christy at 9:30, in the other games of this division.

15-Bout Amateur Boxing Card At Coliseum to Feature Four Community Center Champions

Seven matches, featuring four newly-crowned city-wide community center champions and three of St. Louis' outstanding simon-pure fighters, will top Benny Kessler's amateur boxing card tonight at the Coliseum. The seven headliners will be supported by eight preliminaries. The opening bout will get under way at 8:15 o'clock, 15 minutes ahead of the usual time, due to the large number of matches.

Vorley Broe, heavyweight; Mike Bulla, featherweight; John "Randa" Randazza, welterweight, and Paul Patterson, middleweight, are the new C. C. title holders who will make their first appearance in the ring since annexing laurels.

Broe and Randazza, by the way, are stepping out of the community center ranks for their bouts. The former meets Al Risha, a 200-pounder from the Business Men's gymnasium, and the latter opposes Ed Stoppke of the Wellston A. C. Risha has fought 12 amateur matches, whereas Broe will be fighting his fifth. Stoppke has been fighting around here some time, having enjoyed a successful campaign last year. Broe and Randazza each flattened two foes to win C. C. honors.

Bulla and Patterson will take on boys who gave them a lot of trouble in the Arena tournament. Bulla battles Tony Monaco and Patterson mixes with Dorcey Chaffin. Bulla and his Mullanphy foe entertained 10,000 fans with a thrilling match during the championships. It was a toss-up as to who would be declared the winner until the final round. Chaffin lost to Patterson in a semi-final round bout, but predicts he will even scores in the rematch.

Bulla was voted the "outstanding boy of the tournament," following his match with Monaco.

Jimmy Webb, St. Louis middleweight; Paul Spica, North Side Italian, and Louis Wallach, local bantamweight, all leading fighters in their respective weight divisions, are down to meet three Southern Illinois champions in three bouts which will be fought over the five-round route.

Webb takes on Barney McDuffee of Flora, Spica goes against Tommy Starr of Madison and Wallach battles Ralph Puhse, another Madison boy and a half-brother of Starr. Webb and Spica will be engaging in return bouts. Webb kayoed McDuffee after two seconds of fighting in their first bout, and Spica shaded Starr recently.

GRADUATES OF EASTERN COLLEGES GIVE LUNCH FOR JIMMY CONZELMAN

Graduates of Eastern colleges yesterday gave a luncheon in honor of Jimmy Conzelman, head football coach at Washington University, and listened to Conzelman's hopes and plans for the future. Line Coach Gale Bullman, Harry Brown, 1934 captain; Chick Droke, 1935 co-captain, and Don Wimberly, fullback, also were guests.

Conzelman told of his hopes for an all "big-time" schedule in years to come and reminded his hosts that the October schedule for the Bears this year is a most difficult one, embracing, as it does, games with Illinois, Michigan State, Duquesne and Southern Methodist U. The idea of the luncheon was to acquaint St. Louis college men with the football aims of Washington.

Among the colleges represented were Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth, Brown and Cornell.

Brouillard and Rosenbloom Win In Coast Bouts

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6.—Firmly entrenched as a favorite on the West Coast, Louis Brouillard, former world welter and middleweight champion, today looked around for another fistic victim in these parts.

The hard-hitting middleweight from Worcester, Mass., last night stopped Indian Joe Rivers of Fresno, Cal., in the fourth round of their 10-round match. Brouillard weighed 163 pounds, Rivers 162.

Unleashing a vicious attack, Brouillard had Rivers down for a count in the second and was punishing him badly in the fourth when Referee George Blake stepped in and stopped it. Rivers was outclassed all the way. It was the Easterner's second victory in a week.

Maxie Rosenbloom, 182, slapped out a verdict in another 10-round bout over Johnny Miler, 181½, Des Moines, Ia., but most of the 4000 customers went home before the affair was over.

The third campaigner from the Atlantic seaboard, Honey Melody, 137, of Boston, ambitious young lightweight, piled up an early lead and held it over Johnny Hines, 136, San Pedro, Cal., winning the decision after 10 rounds of mixing.

BEAUMONT SWIMMERS WIN FROM McKINLEY

Beaumont's swimming team won its fifth meet of the season yesterday, defeating the McKinley team, 48-27, at the Beaumont pool. Bill Ray won the 100-yard free style, Arnold Matthews the 40-yard free style, and Fred Stoy the 100-yard backstroke for Beaumont.

BRAVES' FIELD IS LEASED FOR 11 YEARS BY NATIONAL LEAGUE

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—With their financial difficulties apparently well on the way to settlement, Emil E. Fuchs firmly entrenched as president, and Bill McKechnie definitely assured the job as manager, the Boston Braves were in a position today to make plans for the 1935 pennant race in the National League.

The club's tangled affairs were unraveled to a great extent yesterday when the National League signed the renewal of the lease on Braves Field for the next 11 years, thus eliminating any possibility that dog racing or any other conflicting activity would invade the park before 1946.

The lease, said to have been made at a substantial saving, then was turned over to the Boston club.

Fuchs, who was given a vote of confidence by the league owners, announced that "substantial progress" had been made in straightening out the Braves' financial situation and that he hoped to have all of the club's outstanding indebtedness settled within the next two weeks.

$43,000 in Ticket Sales.

He also disclosed that the advance sale of tickets already had netted $43,000, of which $10,000 was cash in hand.

From Fuchs came the assurance that McKechnie, manager of the Braves for the last five years, again would be at the helm.

As to the possibility of Babe Ruth being sought in some capacity, he declined to comment.

"All I can say about that is McKechnie will be manager," said Fuchs. "I hope to have McKechnie in charge of the team as long as I am in control of the club."

Fuchs revealed for the first time that much of the club's difficulties of the last few months could have been eliminated had the Braves listened to the tempting offers for Ed (Lefty) Brandt and Wally Berger, hard-hitting outfielder.

"But we simply would not do that," he said, "because the fans of Boston always have supported us loyally and we decided we would not let them down like that, no matter what happened. We are keeping all of our best players and will strive to add strength if that can be done in deals."

League Rules Are Changed.

In order to play night baseball it was necessary to change the league constitution, and this was done during the morning session. To keep night baseball within bounds, several restrictions were made. A heavy fine will be levied for any violation. The season opens April 16.

There can be no exhibition games at night, either by the National League teams themselves, or by other teams on National League grounds. Other restrictions were as follows:

1—Each club is allowed seven home night games, with a heavy fine for both participants in case the limit is exceeded.

2—No game that is started in the day time can be finished under lights.

3—No day and night games can be played by the same team on the same day.

4—There shall be no double-headers at night and night games cannot be played on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

Wesley Soccer Results.

The Blue Eagles defeated the Bears, 3-1, in the junior division of the Wesley House Soccer League last night. The Lions and the Stars played a 1-1 tie in the other game. In the senior division, the Dukes and Popeyes drew, 1-1, while the Billikens won from the Aces, 4-2.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Belated Recognition.

SEVERAL years ago, before boxing took on its present woebegone aspect, St. Louis ringworms had a chance to view the efforts of a young Cincinnati southpaw, Freddie Miller.

MILLER

He faced some good men here and he showed plenty of skill, coolness under fire and a great southpaw punch. Later he advanced steadily, beating all comers, finally winning the approbation of the National Boxing Association which formally declared him featherweight champion of the United States.

But that meant nothing, because the New York commission and its henchmen from Massachusetts and Pennsylvania ignored the N. B. A. and maintained a champion of their own—Kid Chocolate. Now Chocolate has faded out and Miller has come on and the East is still slow to recognize the merit of Freddie.

* * *

England Recognizes Miller.

DISGUSTED with his reception in the East, where he did everything asked of him, Freddie went abroad—and today they are blowing trumpets to acclaim him a really fine fighter. Here is what one British critic of standing says of him in a letter to a friend of this writer:

"I have been giving your splendid fighter, Freddie Miller, the 'once over,' as you Americans say, and I find that he is just what a champion should be. He takes on all comers, never turning his back on anybody here.

"He recently fought and won with greatest ease two fights in as many days. Friday night in Paris he knocked out Francis Angier, formerly featherweight champion of France, and on Sunday night in London he gave Joe Connolly of Leith a terrific beating. There is no doubting Miller's merit.

"Miller is the most intriguing boxer seen in British rings in a long time and we would like to have more of the same kind of Yankees visit us."

It is almost time that New York forgot its prejudices and recognized this boy at his real value. New York has backed up many championship claims by fighters who were far from being as meritorious as Freddie.

The Greatest Salesman.

NOT only was Jack Dempsey the standout fighter of his day, but we are forced to recognize him as the world's greatest salesman. And the commodity that Jack peddles is his own personality.

On top of the millions for which he sold himself as a fighter, the hundreds of thousands for which he disposed of himself as a referee of ring and wrestling events, Jack, not many weeks ago, closed what was apparently his greatest feat in selling himself.

* * *

If press reports are authentic Jack, in a few weeks, will begin his new part-time job as host in a brand-new cafe on Eighth Avenue, New York. A short time ago the new enterprise was launched with Jack placing in the cornerstone the gloves with which he defeated Willard and won the world title. The establishment was christened "Jack Dempsey's Cafe."

That was part of an alleged contract whereby, without investing his own money, Jack will receive $40,000 annually and 10 per cent of the profits from the establishment. And in return he is to put in a certain number of hours—probably not more than three a day—counting leaves of absence—in meeting all comers, patrons of the place. In the meantime, all his other activities may continue.

* * *

Tunney Can't Do It.

No other fighter has ever been able to approach this post-championship success. There isn't much doubt that Jack, since he quit active title campaigning, has made as much money as he did during his actual fighting career. And the longer the interval since the passing of his prime, the more popular he seems to become.

"Come Blow Your Horn."

THE Dizzy Dean influence is abroad in the land. Scouts tell us that instead of humility and modesty, the young fellows writing in for a chance to show their stuff, are all pulling the "I got IT" stuff.

It used to be: "Brother, can you spare a job:" Today the rookies write: "I got what you can't afford to be without."

Dizzy boasted his way through the minors to the top. Now they all think that's the happy road to the front row. Unfortuntaely, there is only one Dizzy—the boaster who can make good. Most of his imitators are likely to turn out to be like "Whataman Shires," the originator of the "watch my smoke" idea.

MISS ORCUTT AND MISS BERG WIN IN MIAMI GOLF TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 6.—Lopsided scores which enabled most of the favorites to advance in easy fashion featured the second 18-hole round of match play today in the mid-winter feminine amateur golf tourney here.

While Miss Maureen Orcutt of Englewood, N. J., was blasting the hopes of Mrs. Bea Gottlieb Martel of New York, 7 and 6, 16-year-old Patty Berg of Minneapolis was scoring an 8-and-6 victory over Miss Dorothy Gardner of Steubenville, O.

ST. LOUIS SHORTSTOP TO GET TRY-OUT AT REDS' TRAINING CAMP

PEORIA, Ill., Feb. 6.—Lee Handley, Bradley's all-round athlete, has withdrawn from school, it was learned yesterday, and will join the Cincinnati Reds at their spring training camp at Tampa, Fla., late this month.

The St. Louis boy is regarded as one of the finest shortstops in Illinois college conference history, both offensively and defensively. He worked out with the Reds in Cincinnati last summer and made quite an impression on Manager Charley Dressen, who formerly played with Peoria in the old Three-I League.

Handley's withdrawal deals another blow to Bradley's basketball team which has dropped six straight games and must face Illinois Wesleyan at Bloomington tonight.

He plans to return to Bradley in September to finish his college course.

By James M. Gould.

Washington University's basketball players forgot all about their football background last night and, devoting thoughts and energies solely to the game invented some 40 years ago by Prof. Naismith, turned in a brilliant upset Valley Conference victory over the Drake Bulldogs. The score was 33-32 and it was unfortunate that only 600 were in the Field House to see the Bears at their season peak.

The Bears entered the game as under dogs. Had not Drake, at Des Moines, handed them a 42-22 defeat, and had not the same Bulldogs routed Iowa U., Big Ten contenders, by a 45-25 score? Thus, observers figured and thus was the futility of using comparative scores as bases for predictions proven.

A Deserved Victory.

There was nothing flukey about the Bears' victory; it was thoroughly deserved. Away to a 10-2 lead, Washington saw its advantage cut by the Bulldogs to a 17-13 advantage at the end of the first half. Their gameness and poise both were tested in the opening minutes of the second half, when Drake tied it up at 19-19 and, after six minutes of play, went into the lead when Xanders, fouled by Martintoni, was successful with two free throws. But, Captain Moller tied it with a setup shot and Hudgens clicked for three points and the Bears were away in front again, this time never to be headed.

In the last seconds, there was excitement to spare, for, with 22 seconds of play remaining, Swan sank a short center shot and the Bulldogs were just a point behind. In this tense situation, the Bears calmly took charge of the ball and kept it until the gun barked the end of the battle. Summing up, it was the Bears' best effort of the season and, technically, one of the best basketball exhibitions seen here in many moons.

With Tulsa handing Grinnell a defeat and the Bears' unexpected victory, the Valley Conference race has four teams decidedly in the running for the championship. Grinnell and Creighton lead with five victories and two defeats each; Washington is next with a 4-3 record and Drake follows with an even break in six games. With games scheduled this week-end, the standing should be even further scrambled.

Coach White used only six men last night, alternating Droke and Sauer at forward at the start and, later, using Droke as guard when Bob Hudgens went out on four personals. Drake used seven men with three of them—Parish, McCloud and Xanders—each scoring seven points. Martintoni and Hudgens divided Washington's high-score honors with 11 apiece.

Both teams utilized their free-throw chances. The Bears sank seven out of 10 and Drake was even better with 10 out of 14.

Bears' High Scorers.

Martintoni and Hudgens dominated the Washington play in the opening period, which saw the Bears take a big lead, Drake rally and play end with Washington four points to the good at the intermission.

In the second period, the Bears started blithely on a goal by Hudgens, but then the Bulldogs began to click nicely and they held the Bears scoreless and counted six points themselves to tie at 19-19. Two free throws put Drake in the lead for the first, last and only time during the evening. Moller tied it again at 21-21 almost immediately. For the next few minutes, the Bears held a safe lead and, by clever play, were able to stave off the Drake flurry just before the end of the game.

Notes of the Game.

The Bears have a queer conference record. All four victories have been scored at home and three of them have been by a single point. They defeated the Oklahoma Aggies, 24-23; the Washburn team, 28-27, and Drake, 33-32. Their other victory was over Tulsa, 21-13.

Louis Sauer, the latest addition to the Washington squad, is a pretty sweet player despite the fact that he weighs only 140 pounds. He failed to work any too well in the first period last night, but, in the second, was an important cog in the team-work.

Only two fouls were called on the Bears and four on Drake in the first period. It was a bit rougher in the second, Washington being penalized for nine fouls and Drake for six.

Creighton will oppose the Bears at the Field House Friday night. If the Bears play the game they did against Drake, there is an excellent chance that they will reverse the 31-28 decision the Bluejays from Omaha gained in the first meeting of the teams.

Washington's long shots were more successful than setup plays, which were made possible by good team-work. Of the Bears' 13 field goals, eight were from far away.

A technical foul late in the second half might well have proved fatal to the Bears. Only a minutes and 45 seconds remained of play when Washington took a fourth time-out. This gave Orebaugh a free throw and he made it to make the score 33-30.

Poll Shows $171,000,000 Was Bet on Horse Races in 13 States During Past Season

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The rapid spread of legalized wagering on horse racing has produced substantial public revenue, based on a compilation of 1934 figures, and it is likely to show a marked increase this year.

Figures for last year show the income for 13 states from license fees or a percentage of the "handle" by the pari-mutuel machines aggregated $5,800,139.22. With New York and Rhode Island added to the list in 1934, this represents roughly a 50 per cent increase in revenue over 1933, although no exact comparison is possible because of the absence of complete official reports.

Illinois led in total wagers with $27,353,557 but ranked no better than seventh in amount paid to the State with $545,670.08. The State does not participate in the mutuel handle, as do many states, but gets its share from license fees, which ranged from $1000 to $2500 daily.

Maryland Led in Revenue.

Ranking second to Illinois in total amount wagered with $25,307,790, Maryland topped the list in revenue to the State with a total of $863,269. Maryland had one of its poorest seasons in recent years financially, however, the total wagers comparing with $28,342,784 in 1933 and the State's profit with $899,903 the year previous.

The smallest State in the Union, Rhode Island, and the largest, Texas, ranked third and fourth respectively, in total amounts that passed through the mutuel machines. Rhode Island fans, with their only track, Narragansett Park, exceeding all expectations in attendance, backed the ponies with $23,211,839 of which the State took $812,414.35. With a smaller "take," the State of Texas received only $553,265.33 from an aggregate of $21,067,625 wagered.

New York State, which had received no revenue from horse racing since the sport was black-balled in 1909, profited to the extent of $284,875.84 as its share of the gate receipts. Although no figures are available on the amount wagered, the gate receipts of $2,855,000 more than doubled those of 1933.

Kentucky Shows Decline.

Besides Maryland, Kentucky was the only other State that reported a decline in the Associated Press survey. The 1933 figures were not available for Illinois, where a racing commission was not created until last February, but it is believed that the State held its own. In Louisiana, where no figures were available for either year as to the amount wagered, the State received more revenue in 1934 due to the fact that there was a longer season. The State derives its income from a daily tax of $250 on Jefferson Park and $500 on the Fair Grounds.

Especially notable also were the increases in Michigan, which had only a short season in 1933, New Hampshire with all of its racing concentrated at Rockingham Park, and Florida, where the figures were computed by seasons and not years.

Dempsey Eligible To Referee Fights In New York Rings

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.

By the Associated Press.

THE State Athletic Commission having reversed a previous decision, Jack Dempsey is free to referee boxing matches in New York State whenever asked by a promoter.

Dempsey always has held a license, but he didn't care to accept the run of routine assignments, and heretofore the commission has refused to allow him special favors.

A rule adopted yesterday, however, permits the commission to assign Jack or anyone else requested by a promoter. The commission still reserves the right to choose the official for any bout on the card.

The commission sought to bring Barney Ross, lightweight champion, back into its good graces by asking him if it was all right to select the winner of the Lou Ambers-Sammy Fuller match, March 1, as the outstanding challenger for the champion's title. Ross, who is under suspension in this State for not fighting the commission's choices, has not answered.

ST. LOUIS STAR LOSES IN TITLE BILLIARD EVENT

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. — The national amateur three-cushion billiard championship went into its third day at the New York A. C. today with Edward Spitz, 52-year-old Bostonian competing in his first national tourney, leading the field with two victories in as many starts.

Conqueror of Edward Lee of New York, the defending champion, and Leon Radler, also of New York, yesterday, Spitz will match strokes with George M. O'Dea of Chicago in the first game tonight. Lee was to play Albert Primeau of Detroit in the afternoon.

The other matinee match was to bring together Arthur Horwitz of Minneapolis, winner of his only start, and Radler, while Gene Deardorff of St. Louis and John S. Davenport of Philadelphia complete the day's program in the final night game.

In a closely contested match, Primeau last night defeated Davenport, 50 to 46, in 81 innings. Primeau's high run was five and Davenport's four.

Despite his defeat, 28-year-old Davenport was the star of the match. Behind 12 points in the seventy-fifth inning, he closed this gap to a difference of three in the seventy-ninth inning. His rally failed, however, when Primeau returned with a safety and then ran out his string.

Spitz continued his winning streak by defeating Radler, 50-30. Radler won the lag and was leading Spitz until the twenty-seventh inning when the Boston player drew ahead, keeping out in front to win the match in 93 innings. Spitz's high run was four, Radler's was three.

Overcoming his opponent's lead of 10 points in the thirty-fifth inning, Lee defeated Deardorff, 40-46, in an uphill battle which lasted 60 innings. This was the shortest game in the tournament and gave Lee an even break in his two games.

MAPLEWOOD IN FIRST-PLACE TIE AFTER VICTORY

By Reno Hahn.

Maplewood High School's basketball team out-roughed and out-tumbled Wellston's squad to come from behind and win an overtime Suburban League game last night at Wellston, 20-19, the victory sending Maplewood into a tie with Clayton for the league lead. Webster, with Gale Keane, Dick Kohlman and Payne dividing the 27 points evenly, defeated Normandy, 27-22.

Both Wellston and Maplewood players spent most of their time in passing the ball to opposing players, or banging the sphere from one end of the court to the other with no one near to receive the pass, with the result that little scoring was effected. The score at the end of the first half was 12-8, favoring Wellston.

Starting the second half, the pace became more rapid, with even wilder passes and collisions between the players. Scoring dropped more, Wellston making three points and Maplewood five, the score being 15-13, Wellston leading, after three quarters had been played.

Tommy Garrett somehow got clear from the fighting players in the final quarter and tied the score at 15-all with a shot from the foul circle. Bob Orf sent Maplewood into the lead for the first time during the game when he smacked into a scrimmage under Wellston's basket and came up with the ball to make a spin shot through the hoop.

With one minute to go, Jess Mitchell stood clear from the milling players and made a long shot from the side that sent the game into an overtime period.

Opening the overtime session, Norman Ficke made his first basket of the game to give Maplewood a 19-17 lead. Bob Taylor, playing his first game since he was out a month ago with a broken wrist, was sent in during the overtime period and made good on a free throw. That was to win the game, for Kelley sank a long shot for Wellston just before the whistle blew, making the final score 20-19.

Keane and Kohlman each made four field goals and a free throw to account for their nine points apiece for Webster, but Payne made his third of Webster's score the hard way, making only one field goal but seven free throws.

Hancock won a non-league game from Fairview, 28-21, at Fairview. Press leading Hancock's scoring with 10 points.

CALIFORNIA IS NOT LIKELY TO FIGHT 8-WEEKS' RULE IN TENNIS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The annual meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis Association Saturday in Cincinnati probably will be as exciting as an old-fashioned sewing bee, although the orderly routine may be enlivened by discussion of the proposed eight-weeks' player expense rule.

The United States, through its delegate, Walter Merrill Hall, president of the U. S. L. T. A., last summer voted the rule in the international federation's regulations, leaving it up to the member nations to incorporate it in their individual canons. The rule limits amateurs to eight weeks' traveling and living expenses each calendar year.

The Eastern Association, the U. S. L. T. A.'s largest member body, unanimously passed the eight weeks' rule at its annual meeting recently, but opposition is expected from Pacific Coast delegates, pointing out that considerable time will be used in traveling across the continent for tournaments in the East.

Like every regulation, the federation's rule possesses a certain amount of elasticity. In cases where California players choose to play in the East, and vice versa, exceptions may be declared and allowances made for traveling time. Therefore it is unlikely California's opposition will be long lived.

"We don't propose to permit the players to commute back and forth across the country," said Hall. "That would be violating the spirit of the rule.

"But, for example, if Donald Budge wants to come from the Pacific Coast to Forest Hills for the national championships next summer, I'm quite sure the week that would be required to come and return would not be charged against him or anyone else, for that matter. However, we'll have to feel our way carefully in these matters."

The meeting probably will vote to change the intercollegiate championships from grass to hard courts. For several years colleges have been opposing holding the championship on turf since most universities have only hard courts.

It is expected that the Executive Committee's recommendation to combine the men's national singles and the women's national singles into one tournament, starting Thursday, Aug. 30, and lasting 10 days, will be approved. The tournament will be conducted much in the same fashion as the all-England championships at Wimbledon.

"THE time has come," the Breadon said,
"To talk of many things;
Of income tax and sealing wax,
And whether pigs have wings;
Of Dean's demand for thirty grand,
And why a crooner sings."

"Do you suppose," the Rickey said,
"If we should talk a year,
That what we said would go in one
And out the other ear?"
"You may be right," the Breadon said,
And shed a bitter tear.

IT'S GRAND ISN'T IT?
A.W.

"Oh, come with me," the Dizzy said,
And took them by the hand;
"A little walk, a little talk,
I think it would be grand."
"How many grand?" the Breadon said,
"We'd like to understand."

Fair Enough.

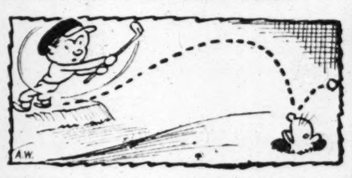
Heine Mueller, who was first discovered by Charlie Barrett, of the Barretts of Hoop-pole Street, has been discovered again by Rogers Hornsby, who signed him with the Browns. Rogers traded Heine down the river in 1926 and to show that there was no ill feeling, brought him back in 1935.

Bobby Grayson is said to have turned down an offer to become a professional wrestler with a guarantee that he would not lose a match in his first year. Name of promoter is not given, but it was probably the well and favorably known Mr. Phix.

Talk about hair-raising stories. That one about the doll with hair that grew four inches in 12 years is one to make your scalp creep.

Worth-While Scraps.

See where England and France agreed to the scrapping of the restrictive armament clause in the Versailles peace treaty as regards to Germany. Peace hath her scraps no less renowned than war.



It was reported that Charles Spoehrer of St. Louis on Feb. 3 had made the first hole-in-one for 1935. It was found later, however, that the groundhog had beaten him to it the day before.

Both performances were made under adverse conditions. Spoehrer was shooting against the wind while Br'er Woodchuck had the sun in his eyes.

See where Paul Dean, junior member of the firm of Dean Bros., Inc., has also pulled an Oliver Twist, or, as you might say, a financial charley horse. It's an old family trait.

Heine Meine, who has been retiring batters as a member of the Pirates for six years, has decided to take himself out and go on the retired list.

Any doubt as to the success of the reform movement to clean up the moving pictures was removed when the producers made a gold mine out of a Copperfield.

When Van Lingle Mungo's contract was received in the Brooklyn office unsigned and no word of comment enclosed, Bob Quinn immediately got in touch with Sherlock Holmes, who in turn paged Dr. Watson. A three-cornered huddle ensued. When the finger prints had been compared, plaster casts taken of the foot prints, the brand of tobacco in the cigarette traced to its source, the unanimous opinion of the investigating committee was that what Van wanted was more dough.

CALIENTE GOLF EVENT WINNERS TO PROFIT FROM MUTUEL WAGERS

By the Associated Press.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Feb. 6.—With one eye on the barometer and the other on the wind gauge, golf's gold seekers backtracked the trail of the Spanish Conquistadors into Tijuana Valley today for the Agua Caliente $5000 sweepstakes which opens tomorrow.

Additional rain was forecast for today as most of the field of 200 players went out to get a preview of the long, trying 72-hole course. Most of the players admitted they were more worried over which direction the wind would be blowing.

Annually the breeze off the Pacific has blown someone out of the championship, for it makes long holes even longer and puts an accuracy premium on the few short ones.

Besides the $5000 prize money posted for the first 19 places, the three leading professionals of each round will receive 10 per cent of a pari-mutuel pool, with wagering on the first three places each day open to the public. The remaining 90 per cent goes to the persons holding winning tickets. No bets will be taken for the 72 holes.

Wiffy Cox, defending champion, will be back in an effort to repeat, with serious opposition expected from Harold McSpaden, leading money winner of the current season; MacDonald Smith, Oakmont medal play winner; Vic Ghezzi, Los Angeles open champion, and George Von Elm and Fred Morrison, former victors in this event.

The field will be shooting at the course record of 282, two under par, posted by Cox a year ago, and the best individual round total of 65, set up by Ray Mangrum, Los Angeles, when the capricious wind took a holiday in 1934.

Should the skies clear for tomorrow, the course still was expected to play heavy through the first rounds because of the soaking it took in recent days.

Play will be limited to 18 holes each day with the final round scheduled for Sunday.

1 YEAR OLD KENTUCKY STRAIGHT WHISKY

Ester Tested for Mellowness

A SCIENTIFIC test which insures uniform mellowness in every bottle is making the great Kentucky straight whisky "BOTTOMS UP" the talk of whisky drinkers everywhere. Though "BOTTOMS UP" has been on the market only a short time, it is already one of the fastest-selling whiskies.

Before bottling, "BOTTOMS UP" is given not less than one year of aging. In addition the ester content, which gives whisky its finer qualities, is carefully checked before any distillation is bottled. Thus aging and scientific testing insure "BOTTOMS UP" buyers of definite smoothness and enjoyment. "BOTTOMS UP" is made with a high percentage of the costly small grains which add so much to flavor and smoothness. Yet "BOTTOMS UP" is low in price. Ask for a bottle at any good dealer's.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Superstition may not score goals, but it's hard to convince a hockey player that the rites that are performed when the team is playing poorly don't have something to do with changing fortunes.

Most of them are smart enough to laugh at themselves, but they won't take chances with their luck. Lester Patrick, for example, has been wearing the same suit every day since the New York Rangers' great winning streak began and when Joe Simpson of the Americans ended a long string of losses with a juggled lineup last Saturday, he kept right on tossing the same array of players at the opposing teams.

Whether or not the changes had anything to do with it the new arrangement of Amerks was good enough last night to come from behind twice and finally wind up in a 3—3 tie with the St. Louis Eagles after coming close to victory in the overtime period.

Eagles' Defense Is Weak.

The Eagles though playing a drab defensive game most of the time, were able to do their share of the goal getting through fast work on face offs, while the Amerks were short handed. Two of their three goals were scored that way and all three were made by the one front line combination of Carl Voss, Syd Howe, and Glen Brydson.

It was a queer looking New York team that took the ice at the start and went one goal down before the game was a minute old. Rabbit McVeigh was at center with Normie Himes, regular center ice performer on right wing. Similarly on the second line, Red Conn was moved out to a flank with Fred Hergert pivoting.

Himes, unfamiliar with his position, was the victim of the first St. Louis tally. He failed to cover Howe on the face off after Red Dutton had drawn a tripping penalty and Syd scored easily after Voss sent him the puck. It wasn't until the second period that the Amerks tied the score when Art Chapman shoved the puck through the Eagle defense. Soon after the start of the third period St. Louis again took the lead when Voss took Howe's pass out near the blue line and whipped home a long shot while Goalie Roy Worters wavered between trying to watch Howe come down the side and see past Burly Bill Brydge toward Voss. Sweeney Schryer's clever stick handling evened the count as he took the puck almost the length of the rink to score.

Amerks Go Into Lead.

The Amerks forged to the front for the first time when the overtime period was nearly half over. Goaler Bill Beveridge went down alongside his net trying to break up a raid by McVeigh and Obs Heximer recovered the puck and flipped it over him into the vacated cage. Three minutes later, the score again was tied while Bill Brydge was in the penalty box. Again it was a face off play and Pete Kelley got the puck during a scramble for it and whisked it over to Brydson, who was left unguarded long enough to slam in a shot from 20 feet in front of the goal.

FAUROT SENDS SQUAD OF 75 FOOTBALLERS THROUGH A WORKOUT

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Feb. 6. — Don Faurot, new University of Missouri football coach, snapped his Tiger squad through a stiff two-hour indoor workout yesterday as the opening gesture of the pre-spring practice.

"Just getting the boys in shape for spring training," was the way Faurot put it. "We're not concentrating on any particular berth—or any certain players."

Faurot went to work in a serious mood, however, as he put some 75 prospective Tiger gridsters through their first taste of his prescription for the ailing Tiger football team.

Faurot said he expected Chauncey Simpson, recently appointed assistant football coach, would come here from Kirksville about March 1 when the spring practice is to get under full swing.

HERMANN FIVE IS READY FOR TENPIN MATCH

The Hermann Undertakers of St. Louis, and the Pabst Blue Ribbons, Chicago, will resume their intercity match at the Rogers Recreation Saturday night at 8 o'clock when the first block of the final half of the match will be bowled. The second and third blocks will be rolled Sunday afternoon and evening.

Ambrose Nathe, newest member of the Hermanns, did the best bowling for the local team in Chicago, averaging 207 for the nine games. Ad Carlson, who in a recent poll of Chicago bowlers, was voted the most popular bowler in the Chicago district, was the star of the match, shooting 1904, for an average of 211.5, for the Pabst team.

Prices for the match are: Reserved seats—75 and 50 cents and general admission 25 cents.

Strohs to Meet Heils.

The Stroh Bohemians of Detroit, defending team champions, will oppose the Heil Packers, Milwaukee, in a title match at Milwaukee this week end with the final half to be bowled in Detroit the following week. Gil Zunker, star anchor man of the Heils, recently broke his ankle and will be replaced by the veteran Charley Daw, former match game champion.

The Heils, rated as one of the best teams in the country, finished second in the Middle West tourney held here last December. They then went to Toledo where they captured the five-man title in the Central States tournament.

Crimmins and Green in Finals.

Johnny Crimmins of the Tivolis and Joe Green of the Goebels, survived a field of 145 bowlers and will represent Detroit in the National elimination finals. Crimmins and Green gained the finals by outbowling Charley Kotarski and Wally Reppenhagen last week, Crimmins collecting 2471 and Green 2398. Kotarski scored 2303 and Repp 2280.

William Heerman paced the semifinal round in the Chicago eliminations with a 12-game score of 2499. Jerry Jouron placed second with 2467, and Barney Krause third, one pin back. Other victors were: Harry Kaad, Eli Maricich and Paul Krumske. Among the eliminated bowlers was Dominick DeVito, former A. B. C. champion, who rolled only 2227.

In the women's division of the Chicago trials, Agnes Crocombe led the semifinals with 1404. F. Trettin also qualified with a 1332.

Neither dates nor the alleys where the national finals will be held has been decided by the Bowling Prophietors' Association of America, the organization sponsoring the match game championships.

Benkovic Trims Falcaro.

Joe "Chesty" Falcaro, who recently appeared here in several exhibitions, was given a sound trouncing by Frank Benkovic, star Milwaukee bowler, in a 30-game exhibition match in Milwaukee last week-end, Benkovic winning by 1008 pins. Frank rolled 7112 pins for an average of 237.33, while Falcaro toppled 6104 for a 203.8 mark.

It was Falcaro's worst defeat in his 28 years of bowling, and his second walloping by Benkovic, who defeated "Chesty Joe" by 665 pins in a 30-game affair four years ago.

In the final game of the Sunday afternoon set, Benkovic clouted the pins for a perfect score of 300, the sixth of his career, and in the fifth game of the evening block, hit for 299.

The scores of the final 20 games:

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Feb. 6.—The St. Louis Flyers defeated the Oklahoma City Warriors in an American Association hockey game here last night, 1 to 0. The winning score came in the first overtime period. The victory put the Flyers in a tie for first place with Tulsa.

For the three regulation periods the Warriors had high hope of at least holding the Flyers to a tie, but a quick flip by Depaul after six minutes of overtime ended the game. Scott was credited with the assist.

The game was rough and fast throughout. Burns, Warrior manager, was hurt in the third period, when he crashed into the wall, but was able to continue the game after a brief rest.

The Flyers' hopes went high in the first period, when McPherson flipped one in, but Referee Farrell ruled that the puck went in through the net at the side. The Warriors carried the game into St. Louis territory all the way, showering Goalie Murray with numerous goal tries.

In their answers to an involuntary bankruptcy petition, Edward J. Butler, president of the Gunners Football Club, and Charles F. Walsh, coach, yesterday denied that they operated as partners in running the affairs of the club, or that they are indebted to the petitioners. Each filed a separate answer in Federal Judge Davis' court, the wording in each case being precisely the same.

By the Associated Press.

S. S. JACOB RUPPERT, at Sea (via Mackay Radio).—Feb. 6.—The Byrd Antarctic Expedition, its men and supplies aboard the S. S. Jacob Ruppert and the Bear of Oakland, left Little America today, headed home to the United States.

The expedition is proceeding west along the front of the tall ice cliffs of the Ross ice barrier, bound for Discovery Inlet to collect live penguins.

The barkentine Bear of Oakland, under command of Lieut. Robert A. J. English is in the lead, under sail with a fair following wind and using her engines as well. A light ice pack covers the sea to starboard.

The last hours, marking the close of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's second expedition to the South Polar region were crowded. At 6 p. m. yesterday the Jacob Ruppert was obliged by a series of minor ice falls to withdraw from her loading berth in Eleanor Bolling Bight. The flagship's commander, Commodore H. J. Gjertsen, decided it was not prudent to hold a steel ship there longer.

Ships Transfer Supplies.

The Bear of Oakland took the Ruppert's place, loading her decks with stores which, at 8:30 a. m. today were transferred to the flagship.

For more than a year the expedition, most elaborately equipped in the history of exploration, has been making its observations and expanding the aerial photographic record of the vast uncharted South Polar terrain.

The expedition hoped, Admiral Byrd explained at its start, to gather information which would contribute to improved wireless communication, sea and air navigation and weather forecasting.

It was planned to map and claim any areas of ice recession, determine the extent to which any of the region's natural resources might be utilized by man, attempt to sound the depth of the ice cap, and probe the mysteries of cosmic rays.

The party embarked from Boston Sept. 25, 1933, on board the Bear of Oakland. The supply ship, the Jacob Ruppert, set sail a month later from Newport News.

The explorers reached Little America in January of last year and were cheered to find still intact the base abandoned by the first Byrd expedition in 1930.

Byrd's Solitary Vigil.

Most dramatic of the second expedition's multifold activities was Admiral Byrd's solitary vigil in a winter conservation post on the Ross barrier, far from the base of Little America. Byrd started his voluntary exile Feb. 4, 1934, planning to spend seven months in the tiny, snow-buried shack which constituted his winter quarters.

For five months he kept in communication with other members of the party by radio. Then nine days passed with no reports from the lonely outpost. The anxiety of the Admiral's associates was only partly relieved at the end of that time, when a feeble and faltering message was picked up by the Little America radio station.

Relief expeditions started to Byrd's aid. Twice they were forced back before they were able to cover the unmarked and snow-swept route to his post. There the rescuers found their leader ill from the effects of carbon monoxide gas and so weak he was unable to crank the magneto to provide power for his radio.

Fact Party Established.

With the coming of warmer weather, tractor and aerial parties set out from Little America to conduct explorations in areas hundreds of miles distant. Admiral Byrd reported that, as a result of these activities, conclusive evidence had been accumulated that the once-suspected trans-Antarctic strait bisecting the Continent does not exist. Marie Byrd Land, he said, on the basis of latest information, runs in an unbroken line from the Antarctic Coast to the South Pole.

The observations, he announced, added approximately 200,000 square miles to the possessions the expedition had claimed in the name of the United States.

Discovery by one of the sledging parties of coal veins and fossilized trees and ferns was regarded as evidence that the South Polar region once enjoyed a mild and humid climate, perhaps even tropical.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 6.—Mrs. Richard Evelyn Byrd, wife of the Antarctic explorer, arrived today from Boston and will board a liner tonight for Dunedin, New Zealand, to join her husband.

Premier Danseuse of Metropolitan to Be Bride of Douglas J. Murphey.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Miss Rita De Leporte, premier danseuse of the Metropolitan Opera Co., announced last night her engagement to marry Douglas J. Murphey of St. Louis.

The dancer said the wedding would take place in New York in April or June, depending on opera engagements for which she is under contract. She will leave the Metropolitan Company and make her home in St. Louis.

Murphey, who is director of publicity for the General American Life Insurance Co., met Miss De Leporte last autumnu when she was in St. Louis to train the ballet for the opera season at the Municipal Auditorium here. It was, she said, "just another case of love at first sight."

In preparation for her marriage Miss De Leporte took instructions in the Catholic faith and last week Murphey came to New York to be present when she received her first Holy Communion at the Cenacle of St. Regis.

Miss De Leporte, who is 28 years old, joined the Metropolitan ballet several years ago when Mme. Rosina Galli, wife of Gatti-Casazza, general manager of the Metropolitan, saw her perform at a dancing school. In 1931 she succeeded Mme. Galli as premier danseuse.

Murphey is a son of Mrs. Maurice F. Murphey, 227 East Lockwood avenue, Webster Groves. He is 28 years old, a graduate of St. Louis University in the class of 1928.

Last Spring Murphey met Miss De Leporte casually when she came here for the opening opera season, but their romance began, he said, when she returned in the Fall, when they met again through Walter W. Head, president of the General American Life Insurance Co. and chairman of the Opera Founders' Committee.

The lynching followed the murder at Santa Rosa Dec. 5, 1920, of Miles M. Jackson and Lester H. Dorman, San Francisco police detectives, and Sheriff James A. Petray of Sonoma County, who were shot to death by George Boyd in an attempt to arrest Boyd, Terence Fitts and Charles Valento, members of the gang.

OBJECTS TO RFC LOAN TO FIRST NATIONAL CO.

M. Lazarus Siegle Says Conditions Are Indefinite and Possibly Prejudical to Rights.

Objections to the proposal of the First National Co., former investment affiliate of the First National Bank, to borrow $4,403,075 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to enable a 46 per cent payment on it defaulted "guaranteed first mortgage participations," were filed in Circuit Court yesterday by M. Lazarus Seigle and his daughter, Cecelia, described as holders of $6500 of the participations.

The First National Co., formerly owned by the bank's stockholders, sold $9,577,500 of the so-called "guaranteed participations" to the public and then permitted them to go into default May 1, 1933.

Conditions of the RFC loan were indefinite and possibly prejudicial to rights which might be asserted by holders seeking to hold the bank jointly liable with the company, the objectors stated. They asked that the court enter no order on the petition for approval of the loan unless the bank agrees not to plead any statute of limitation in any action filed by participation holders before May 1, 1943.

An additional four-year extension of the participations to May 1, 1942, appeared to be "superfluous to the interests of the RFC," the Seigles said, and could not be to the best interests of any of the interested parties other than the First National Bank. The four-year extension had been made a condition of the 46 per cent payment. Holders of about 78 per cent of the participations had agreed to a five-year extension, to May 1, 1938, following the default.

Furthermore, there was no provision in the commitment of the RFC which would postpone or limit a sale of the underlying real estate mortgages under foreclosure on maturity of the loan, the objectors said. The RFC might be unable to grant an extension of its loan, to run three years, since its future depended on Congress, they pointed out.

The company's plan contemplated pledge to the RFC of all the outstanding real estate mortgage notes and bonds behind the participations. These notes and bonds, most of them having a face value of $1000 to $5000, had a total face value of about $9,700,000 when the participations were sold, but there was a default in principal or interest payments on $4,427,615 at the time of the default in the participations, according to an auditor's report.

Under the plan, the RFC would liquidate enough of the pledged assets to satisfy its loan and equity remaining would revert to trustees for benefit of the participation holders. So far the trustees, the First Natioanl Bank and former Gov. Henry S. Caulfield, have made two distributions totaling only 4 per cent, $383,100. Caulfield was appointed co-trustee by the Circuit Court to settle litigation brought by participation holders.

The 3500 holders, most of them St. Louisans, have been notified by the company of a hearing on its RFC loan plan in Circuit Judge Baron's court, Feb. 16. The Seiglès, represented by Hyman G. Stein, reside at 5379 Pershing avenue.

DRIVER ACQUITTED OF CHARGE IN AUTO CRASH WITH JUDGE

B. F. Grieb Was Accused of Felonious Wounding; C. W. Rutledge and His Wife Were Injured.

Bernard F. Grieb, an electrician, 4345 Michigan avenue, was found not guilty of felonious wounding by a jury in Circuit Judge Russell's court yesterday.

The charge resulted from an automobile collision at Morganford road and Wyoming street last Feb. 18, when former Circuit Judge and Mrs. Charles W. Rutledge were injured. Mrs. Rutledge testified she had been confined to her home for four months because of fractures of the jaw and ribs. Rutledge said Grieb was driving north on the wrong side of Morganford.

Grieb testified the street was slippery and that his windshield was coated with ice because of a spray of water from a broken fireplug nearby.

House Committee Favorably Reports Bill After Hearing Chief of Staff.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—An army of 165,000 enlisted men and 12,400 officers was recommended to Congress by the House Military Affairs Committee yesterday.

The committee, after hearing a detailed statement of the Army's needs from Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, favorably reported the Thompson bill to provide for the augmented army.

The Army now consists of 118,750 men and 12,000 officers, and the additional 46,250 men and 400 officers would be added, under the bill's provisions, over a five-year period.

MacArthur declared that appropriations totaling $405,000,000 were necessary to modernize thoroughly the Army and to insure the nation's defense against any possible aggression.

WOUNDED WOMAN IDENTIFIED AS EXTORTION PLOT SUSPECT

Patient in Kansas City (Mo.) Hospital Jumped Bond in 1933, Police Say.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 6.—Lieut. William Gordon, head of the identification bureau of the Kansas City Police Department, said today a woman seriously wounded in a hospital here had been identified through fingerprints as one of three persons charged in an extortion plot in October, 1933.

Gordon said the woman, who gave her name as Mrs. Helen Rush, 27 years old, was Frances Taylor and that when confronted with her fingerprints, she admitted her identity.

Frances Taylor, Dolores Ballard and a man were charged with having attempted to extort money from Dr. John G. Hayden. Mrs. Taylor was a fugitive in the extortion case, having jumped $2500 bond. Officers could not give the status of the case as concerns the other two. Mrs. Vinita Stacy, 32, who was taken in custody late yesterday shortly after the shooting of Mrs. Rush, or Taylor, has refused to talk.

MUD ROADS IMPASSABLE

BROOKFIELD, Mo., Feb. 6.—Reports from rural districts in North Missouri are that the country roads are almost impassable. Rural mail carriers have had to resort to cross fields afoot to deliver mail, and cars and wagons are out of the question. Practically all carriers except those on gravel roads are riding horse back as in old times. A funeral party was stuck in the mud, and three hours were consumed in negotiating a quarter of a mile near Linneus.

PREMIER FLANDIN HISSED AND JEERED

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

PARIS, Feb. 6.—Violence broke out today during observance of the anniversary of the Paris riots of February, 1934. Shouting youths clashed with police within sight of Notre Dame Cathedral, following religious services in memory of the 19 persons killed in last year's street fighting. Demonstrations continued tonight.

Thousands of young men, most of them in uniform, during the day chanted the "Marseillaise" and shouted "France for the French!" They withstood a police charge in the Place St. Michel, but police clubbed them so violently that they kept moving. Many of the young men struck down policemen with loaded canes.

At Notre Dame Cathedral, Premier Pierre Etienne Flandin and Prefect of Police Langeron were hissed and jeered as they entered and left the religious service. Inside the cathedral Flandin bowed his head and listened to the memorial mass celebrated by Cardinal Verdier. In the choir stood a flag-draped casket symbolizing the dead and to them the Cardinal granted absolution.

"There Goes the Assassin."

At the close of the service, a group of 30 or 40 persons shouted "There goes the assassin!" as the Prefect of Police walked down the aisle with Flandin. They continued to shout epithets, some of which were coupled with Flandin's name, but their calls were drowned by the noise of the excited crowd.

Outside, a solid barrier of police kept the crowd away from the steps and permitted the egress of the officials and others from the Cathedral.

A man broke through the police lines and ran toward Premier Flandin. He was arrested but told the authorities he wished only to tell the Premier of the country's troubles. He was unarmed.

As Flandin's automobile left, members of the royalist "King's Henchmen" shouted: "France for the French! On to the Place de la Concorde! Down with the Assassins!"

Police Lines Threatened.

The crowd massed around the cathedral threatened several times to break the police lines, and many times the police were on the point of charging. The clash came finally only when the shouting youths blocked the Place St. Michel and refused to move until they were driven off.

Part of the cathedral crowd moved slowly toward the Place de la Concorde, scene of last year's worst fighting, where they encountered additional guards.

In the meantime, marching columns of royalists and other students threatened trouble around the Sorbonne. The royalists tore down Socialist posters. Leftist groups quickly retaliated by tearing down manifestos posted by the rightists. They also tore down Government posters which ordered university classes suspended.

Government Prepared.

The Government had 14,000 police, 20,000 mobile guards and 50,000 troops at its command to be called out in any emergency. The Premier canceled all engagements, to keep in touch with the situation.

Splotches of red paint appeared on statues and the bridge in the Place de la Concorde. Red inscriptions were painted on walls overnight and defiant posters appeared in some sections.

Approximately 1000 policemen surrounded the Place de la Concorde and kept those who came there with floral tributes to the 1934 dead on the move, giving them only time to make their gesture of respect.

Wreaths on Fountain.

Wreaths of roses and other flowers accumulated about the fountain at the south side of the Place de la Concorde. The largest tributes came from the Duke de Guise, pretender to the French throne. The families of the dead added their tributes to the mound of flowers. By afternoon, a long double line of men and women bearing clusters of blossoms had congregated around the fountain. As they

Huey Long Puts on Great Show In Georgia House; 10,000 Hear Speech, Roar 'Pour It on 'Em"

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 6.—United States Senator Huey Long yesterday gave an impressive exhibition here of his strength as a drawing card and his talents as a spellbinder. For one hour and 20 minutes he addressed an audience which included the Governor of Georgia, the House of Representatives, department heads and about 10,000 persons who jammed the House chamber and balconies, and packed the lawns and streets surrounding the Capitol.

As they say in show business, Huey simply panicked them. He stretched them in the aisles. He had them sitting on the edges of their chairs. He made them laugh, he made them cry, and he made them cheer. Time after time his demands for a redistribution of the wealth were greeted with wild rebel yells. After an hour and five minutes, his suggestion that it was time to conclude elicited a roar of "no, no! give us some more, Huey! Pour it on 'em, Kingfish."

Near the close of the speech he asked for those who agreed with his program to raise their hands. Thousands of hands shot up—including that of Gov. Eugene Talmadge. A scattering of hands were raised in oppostiion, and the Kingfish laughed and remarked: "We've got you beat at least 30 to one." Last night he said to this writer:

Prediction on Carrying Georgia.

"There isn't any doubt about how Georgia stands. I could run against Roosevelt in this State tomorrow, and lick him to death. I already had Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas, and I'll take Alabama when I get ready. Next year you'll see Roosevelt making a hard campaign to hold the South, and you'll see me running him ragged."

Whether such a threat should be taken seriously is something only the future can determine, but the longer one studies Long in action, the less one is inclined to treat him lightly. He is already a political force of incalculable influence, and his influence is expanding. His "share-wealth" societies are gaining members at the rate of 20,000 a day, according to the Rev. Gerald Smith, national organizer.

Such a reception as he received here yesterday might have been reserved for an Emperor. Gov. Talmadge and a committee of the Legislature, augmented by at least 1500 curious spectators, met him at the train. The trainshed echoed with enthusiastic yells, as Long stepped off the train, surrounded by his grim-faced bodyguard. Interest in his appearance seemingly had been stirred by the fight made in the House to prevent him from coming. On two occasions the resolution inviting him to address the House had been tabled, only to be carried in a third attempt.

Last night two members of the Senate, William A. Hart and H. Dixon Smith, telegraphed to President Roosevelt "apologizing" for the action of the House. Nevertheless, it was obvious that they represented a small fraction of sentiment in the Legislature. Yesterday afternoon Long had things his own way.

Amplifiers had been set up on the Capitol lawn and downtown street corners, for the accommodation of the thousands who couldn't get into the House chamber. These cheered as loudly as those inside. The speech also was broadcast over a State network.

Long said nothing particularly new in explaining his share-the-wealth plan. In fact, he remarked in beginning that "I have already made this speech five or six times in the Senate." The high light was his proposal of a capital levy on large fortunes, beginning with 1 per cent on the second million dollars, 2 per cent on the third, and so on up to 100 per cent on the ninth million, this levy to be in addition to normal taxes now in operation.

"That would allow anybody to have three or four millions," he said, "and by the eternal God, that's enough." The crowd roared approval.

Estimate of Plan's Returns.

"This plan," he shouted, amid continuing applause, "would bring in from $150,000,000,000 to $165,000,000,000 tomorrow. Somebody might say the rich fellows would get it all back. No, no. We'd levy on it every year. You know, just take a look at the hole card every year."

He criticised some phases of the national administration's recovery program, particularly its farm program, and said that "when Mr. Hoover left the presidency—and he was bad enough for me—the national debt was 19 billion dollars, but today it's 29 billion dollars."

Senator Long left Atlanta last night accompanied by a bodyguard of three Louisiana State policemen and Washington correspondents who had been reporting his recent investigation in Baton Rouge of purported plots to assassinate him. He arrived in Washington at noon today.

Legislature Invites President Roosevelt to Speak Before It.

The Georgia House and Senate today unanimously adopted a resolution inviting President Roosevelt to address the Legislature.

"The rock-ribbed democracy of Georgia has evidenced its abiding faith in the leadership of that great American, Franklin D. Roosevelt," said the resolution. It said the President's appearance would "prove of great benefit to the representatives of the people of Georgia." The Legislature will be in session until late in March.

BAR POLL ON METHOD OF NOMINATING JUDGES

Proposal to Indorse Convention Plan Submitted to St. Louis Attorneys.

The St. Louis Bar Association sent ballots to its members today for their expression on a recommendation that the association indorse the bill for nomination of judicial candidates by political conventions instead of in the primary. The recommendation was made by the association's committee on amendment of laws.

Sponsors of the bill, which has been introduced in the Legislature, contend practical experience has shown that the primary threatens to put State's appellate judiciary and the Circuit Judges in the larger cities under control of the established Tom Pendergast machine in Kansas City and the growing Jimmy Miller machine in St. Louis.

With the ballots, which members were asked to return before next Tuesday noon, was inclosed the committee's formal report and recommendations.

In recommending indorsement of the bill, the committee said it had concluded that "from a practical standpoint the best that can be hoped for by the association at present is the nomination of candidates for Judges of the Supreme Court, Judges of the Court of Appeals and Circuit Judges of St. Louis by delegate conventions."

The committee recommended nomination of St. Louis Circuit Judges by the convention method.

The law, the committee said, should provide for election by each political party at the August primary of delegates constituting the various judicial conventions. Delegates to the judicial convention for nomination of St. Louis Circuit Judges should be nominated from each legislative district, the committee recommended, and delegates to the judicial conventions of their respective parties to nominate candidates for Judges of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals should be elected from the various counties and the wards in St. Louis.

IMMERSION ROW RENEWED AT GEORGETOWN COLLEGE

Kentucky Baptist Association Cuts Off Funds Till President Is Re-Baptised.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 6.—The controversy over the unimmersed president of Georgetown College, Dr. Henry Noble Sherwood, reached the financial stage yesterday when the executive board of the General Association of Kentucky Baptists voted, 46 to 1, to withhold funds from the Baptist institution until the "situation there is corrected."

Demand that Dr. Sherwood be re-baptised in accordance with the tenets of the Baptist denomination which requires immersion was made at the annual Baptist convention in Henderson last fall. Dr. Sherwood, a native of Indiana, who was received into the Baptist denomination from a church which allows baptism by sprinkling, did not comply.

The board of trustees of Georgetown, one of the oldest colleges west of the Alleghenies, voted 12 to 5 to uphold the president and so advised the board by letter.

The financial aid from the executice board amounts to $8000 a year. Its action does not prevent any Baptist church from contributing to Georgetown's support.

NORMAN THOMAS DEBATES TOWNSEND ON PENSION PLAN

Socialist Leader Says at New York That Scheme Is "Syrupy Patent Medicine."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Norman Thomas, the Socialist leader, called the Townsend $200-a-month-for-the-aged plan a "syrupy patent medicine" in a debate last night with Dr. F. E. Townsend, author of the scheme.

Following Thomas on the radio, Townsend retorted it would be 'economic lunacy" not to enact the plan into law.

Thomas said the estimated $24,000,000,000 annual cost "threatens us with catastrophic collapse" and that the weight of the 2 per cent gross transactions tax necessary for the plan would "almost paralyze business."

Townsend replied that the nation's annual crime bill was 12 billions, and "we could afford 33 billions to promote a European world war."

Thomas asserted the 24 billions was more than half the national income in 1934 and that Townsend proposed to give it all to "7 per cent of our people who do not work, leaving the remainder to support all the other people."

Townsend replied that retirement of all old people would create jobs and spending power.

PERMANENT PLANNING BOARD FOR MISSOURI RECOMMENDED

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 6.—The creation of a permanent State Planning Board, which would draft a master plan for the State and aid in the obtaining of Federal Public Works grants, was recommended yesterday at a hearing before the Senate Committee on Railroads and Internal Improvements. The committee has pending before it Gov. Park's bill for such a board. The Governor appointed an unofficial board last year which has drawn up a tentative plan.

R. W. Selvidge, head of the Department of Mechanical Engineering at Missouri University and chairman of the unofficial board, told the committee that the creation of a board was "long overdue" and would be one of the "chief cogs in pulling us out of the depression."

The board would be advisory and would co-ordinate the activities of present State commissions and make suggestions on any buildings or improvements to be made in the State.

ILLINOIS GETS COURTHOUSE WHERE LINCOLN PRACTICED

Logan County Building to Be Maintained by State as Memorial.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 6.—Illinois acquired title yesterday to another Abraham Lincoln shrine, the old Logan County Courthouse at Mount Pulaski. It is one of the few remaining buildings in which Lincoln practiced law. Gov. Horner announced that ownership has been transferred to the State by Logan County. It will be kept in its original appearance and furnishings at State expense as a memorial to Lincoln.

The old Woodford Courthouse at Metamora, another State-owned monument, is the only other remaining building in which Lincoln practiced law. Paul M. Angle, State Librarian, said there are other buildings existing in which Lincoln argued legal cases.

AMERICAN HELD IN MEXICO, ACCUSED OF SWINDLING FIRM

MEXICO, D. F., Feb. 6.—Robert Ernest Vinson, former president of Western Reserve University at Cleveland, O., was freed under bail yesterday pending trial on charges of fraudulent using 100,000 pesos of a company of which he was treasurer.

Other officers of the company, the Compania Mexicana de Maderas, filed the charges against Vinson in order to get an accounting of the use of the money, one of them said.

Vinson came to Mexico about a year ago. He said that he had been given only a small sum of money, which he employed in the legitimate interests of the company, which deals in lumber.

CLEVELAND, Feb. 6.—Dr. Robert E. Vinson sent a telegram to relatives here in which he said he had "no fear" of the charges filed against him in Mexico City.

JEROME FRANK, 4 OTHERS FIRED IN AAA SHAKEUP

'Brain Truster' and Colleagues Resign After Friction Over Crop Control Programs.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—A conflict in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration resulted today in the virtual ousting of Jerome Frank, known as an "original brain truster," and four other officials. The shakeup, coming after a period of friction, was said to be a victory for the more conservative school represented by Farm Administrator Chester Davis.

Frank, former Chicago attorney and friend of Prof. Felix Frankfurter of Harvard, resigned today as counsel to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Besides Frank, three lawyers under him resigned, Lee Pressman, Francis Shea and Victor Rotnem. Gardner Jackson of the consumers' counsel was not included in the revised staff.

The men who were informed that resignations were in order said the action taken by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace at the instance of Davis was a complete surprise. Some of them attempted to communicate with Rexford Tugwell, Under-Secretary of Agriculture, who is in Florida, but whether they succeeded was unknown.

Row Over Crop Control Policies.

Word of the requested resignations came after an official announcement which told simply of a reorganization. Frank and the others were not mentioned. The announcement said the legal division of AAA would be consolidated with the office of the department solicitor, Seth Thomas.

One contention of the school of which Frank is a representative has been that some of the Government programs for controlling crops and regulating marketing have favored large land owners and handlers of farm products. One issue said to be involved was that of Southern share croppers. There has been criticism that control activities were working to their disadvantage.

The viewpoint in the Davis camp has been that many of the critics have no practical knowledge of farming and that they have hampered the recovery campaign.

Friction for Some Time.

For some time there has been friction between Frank's division, the Consumers' counsel and the administrator's office. Several times the disputes went to Wallace for settlement.

A previous internal disagreement resulted in the resignation of the former administrator, George N. Peek, who took a group of his followers with him. He later became a special adviser to the President on foreign trade.

Davis, in his formal announcement, said the commodities division would be broken up into several smaller divisions, each reporting directly to the administrator's office.

The operating council will consist of Secretary Wallace and Davis as co-heads, Solicitor Thomas and the following heads of the various sections: A. G. Black, livestock; Ward M. Buckles, finance; Cully A. Cobb, cotton; Victor Christgau, commodities purchase, farm labor, drouth and other emergency programs; J. B. Huston, tobacco, sugar, peanuts and rice; George A. Farrell, wheat and other grains; Alfred D. Stedeman, information; Jesse W. Trapp, dairy; H. R. Tolley, planning; and the Consumers' counsel.

Dr. Howe Likely to Go.

For the time being, Dr. Fred C. Howe remains as head of the Consumers' counsel, but his transfer to another division was said to be likely. Davis was said to have been displeased with some of the activities of Howe's branch.

Frank has been known as a close friend of Dr. Tugwell's. As a liberal lawyer in Chicago, Frank wrote a book called "Law and the Modern Mind," which won him notice. On coming to AAA, some of his ideas were said to have conflicted with those of Peek, then administrator. In a subsequent clash between "Liberals" and "Conservatives," the former won out, and Peek quit.

Propaganda Ministry Describes Interview as "Polite Visit."

BERLIN, Feb. 6.—Adolf Hitler met the former Crown Prince Wilhelm yesterday.

A "polite visit" was the phrase the Propaganda Ministry used to describe the interview.

N. R. Parker Says New York Corporation Employed Charles Denby in 1922 and 1933.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Estimony that Charles Denby, brother of the Secretary of the Navy in Harding's Cabinet, was employed in 1922 and 1923 as a representative of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation in the Orient was received today by the Senate Munitions Committee.

It came from N. R. Parker, treasurer of the company who identified the agent as brother of Edwin Denby, Secretary of the Navy from 1921 to Feb. 18, 1924.

"Can you say why the company hired Denby for China and the Orient when it already had two men there?" asked Senator Clark (Dem.), Missouri, a committee member. "I did not have anything to do with that," Parker replied.

Figures on His Salary.

Denby was employed at $500 a month salary and $1000 a month traveling expenses but a company report disclosed his total earnings were $5048 from November, 1922, to July, 1923.

He was to reecive 5 per cent commission on net profits for any building business he obtained, but the report commented: "No commissions were earned or paid."

Wines and liquors were said by Parker to be often as "necessary as steel" in building warships. His statement came in the midst of an explanation to the committee of cost plus contracts during the war in which the company sought to charge the Government for wines served on trial cruise parties. Previous testimony indicated the charge for wines was disallowed.

His Testimony on Liquor.

"Wines and liquor are just as necessary as steel in many cases," the company treasurer told the committee.

"I presume you would say they should be included in the Vinson (Big Navy) bill," Senator Clark pressed. "I think so," Parker replied.

Urged by Clark to explain, Par-

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

Favors Architectural Competition.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IT is with great interest that I read of plans to institute a national architectural competition for the design of the proposed Thomas Jefferson memorial on our river front. Sidney Maestre, finance chairman of the campaign to raise the necessary funds, in announcement of the proposal suggests that the competition be similar to the famous Chicago Tribune tower competition of some years ago, won by the late Raymond Hood.

Surely, the Post-Dispatch could do much toward overcoming the resistance that such a proposal will naturally meet in some quarters. There can be little doubt of the wisdom of such an approach to the problem of expending $30,000,000 in a manner to obtain something of real architectural worth. There can always be found those who desire to limit things of this sort to so-called "local talent." Such an attitude lacks foresight, and our city now possesses several glaring examples of this sort of reasoning.

Architects, individually, seem usually adverse to architectural competitions on the ground that reputation and past work should warrant the definite assignment of commissions. The American Institute of Architects, however, favors the competition plan for works of a public character involving, particularly, the expenditure of large sums of the public funds.

It is planned to conduct a campaign in the near future to raise funds necessary to defray the expenses of the competition and of preliminary surveys, according to Mr. Maestre. Let us hope that your paper will do all in its power to further this proposal to aid St. Louis in obtaining a river front memorial to Thomas Jefferson, appropriate, in its simple beauty, to the dignity of our great city on the river.

"Must," Not "May."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I WISH to thank you for your very clear, logical and timely editorial of Feb. 2, entitled "The Gag Rule." However, the situation is even worse than you have indicated. Where you say "resolution or papers may be referred by the Speaker," you should have said "must," as the gag rule referred to provides that when "any member" so moves, "it shall be the duty of the Speaker to make" such reference.

Giggers and Game Fish.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN proposing new and harsh legislation against the gigging of fish in the Ozarks, the sportsmen who fostered Mr. Putnam's bill seem to lose sight of the fact that the game fish they are so anxious to encourage are seldom, if ever, the giggers' target.

The gigger kills suckers, catfish, red horse, buffalo and eels. None of these will take a fly and only with great care and expense can any of them be shipped.

The gigger usually operates in the bow of a very tippy canoe. He must instantly calculate the speed of a running fish, his depth and the refraction. If he strikes far enough ahead and far enough underneath and hard enough, he might kill a darting bass, but if he should get one bass in 50 throws, he would do well. It is the more sluggish fish that fall before the gigger, however expert he may be.

In Defense of Cats.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I HAVE always considered your paper one of broad views and humanitarian ideals, so was sorry to read your editorial of Jan. 27 condemning our most abused little animals—cats. You speak of them as preying on smaller animals; what defense have they against your kind of propaganda? We have made them helpless and now turn them out into alleys and lone country places to be kicked about and starved. If they are sneaking and treacherous, we have made them so.

I do not ask you to take my word for it that they are dear little friends—find one that needs you and try it for yourself. You will be repaid for your trouble many times over.

Wages and Public Works.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

AT the beginning of the depression, Norman Thomas proposed a five-billion-dollar slum clearance program. Now, after all these bitter years of suffering and the loss of almost unthinkable potential wealth (Mr. Filene estimated 19 billion—or was it 90 billion?—dollars for three years) through enforced idleness, the President seems disposed to tackle the job rather seriously.

His proposition to pay low wages, however, will most likely be used by business as an excuse to reduce wages still lower. The economy of abundance requires higher and higher wages. Perhaps the President fears to oppose business because of lack of popular support. The people are distressingly indifferent.

CLEAR THE AIR!

The people of St. Louis are fast realizing that until cheap smokeless fuels are substituted for raw soft coal, there can be no material improvement in the smoke situation.

Moved by the rising tide of public opinion, the Board of Aldermen has ordered an investigation into the natural gas situation. The investigation will begin Feb. 14. Like the 17 other cities joining with us in protest against fuel monopolies which are depriving millions of people of an abundant facility, the Aldermen want to know why St. Louis cannot have cheap natural gas.

In our judgment, the city should simultaneously move to acquire the property of the Laclede Gas Light Co. Once that was accomplished, it would be possible to distribute natural gas at a very low price. Otherwise, the city would have to build its own distributing system. This would be the long way around to a solution of this most pressing of our municipal problems, and it could hardly result in anything but Laclede's withdrawal from competition with the city. It should not be difficult for the city to arrive at a fair price for the property.

Laclede has been exploited by profiteers until it is waterlogged. It is unable to meet its bond maturities. Its valuation for rate-making purposes has been reduced by the Public Service Commission from $52,000,000 to $39,000,000. It has a holding company on its back. It carries the burden of an unprofitable Illinois coking plant. Much of its artificial gas plant is obsolete. It faces constantly the peril of natural gas being brought into the city by a competitor.

Laclede cannot be expected to give the people cheap gas. Its debt structure precludes any such possibility. Over-financed as it is, it needs more money and higher rates at the present set-up. It is persistently seeking higher rates before the State commission. It has successfully resisted thus far a reduction of 6 per cent in rates recently ordered by the commission.

Before the Louisiana Purchase Exposition was held here in 1904, the water supply of St. Louis was as dirty as the present St. Louis air. The city realized that it could not ask the world to come here and use the muddy water that ran from our taps. It was first proposed to bring clear water here by gravity from Meramec Spring. Meanwhile, the Wixford clarifying experiment succeeded. The water was cleared. It is clear now. Once the air is cleared, it will stay clear. The thing is to get it clear, and no greater step to that end could be taken than for the city to buy out the Laclede Gas Light Co. Apart from other possible gains, great dividends would be returned to the city in the improvement of property values and the health of the people.

There is no reason why the city cannot, if it will, take such a progressive step. It is what any great business corporation would do. The business of the community is to conserve the value of property and the public health. We are not doing this in St. Louis. We are driving the people out of the city into the county. We are abandoning the city to the grime and soot which result from using raw soft coal. We will go on using it until the people are given smokeless substitutes at prices they can afford to pay. Coal is cheap. So must its smokeless substitutes be cheap.

We suggest that the municipal government think this over—and act. The smoke ordinance which has been prepared for passage by the Board of Aldermen is just what we have said it is. It is tinkering with a great problem. The way out is for the city to enter the fuel business. It can do so quickly by buying out Laclede. There are other things it can do, but this one is so obvious that it should be moved upon with all possible haste.

HOW THE BRITISH PRONOUNCE 'EM.

A guide on pronunciation has been issued to British broadcasters by an advisory committee, which has been deliberating for a year on the subject. Why it should be necessary to spend a year to find out how to pronounce English words, when the usual custom is merely to consult the dictionary, we do not know.

At any rate, from this time forward, British broadcasters may call it hangkerchiff. They no longer need to affect hankerchiff. That is a true reform. But they must say omlet, ignoring completely the first "e." This is of a piece with that amazing indifference of the British to letters which has reduced Cholmondeley to a mere Chumley. Most respectable dictionaries say conduit should be pronounced condit, but the advisory committee prefers cundit. And here's one for the man on the flying trapeze: aerial, when an adjective, must be pronounced ayeerial. No decision was reached by the committee on the word stern, one school holding out for sturn and another adhering fiercely to starn.

It is clear we are still far from an Anglo-American accord on how to use the English language.

SENATOR BORAH ON MEXICO.

Senator Borah's proposal for a Senate investigation into "religious persecution and brutality" in Mexico has met with an official rejoinder from that country. Former President Emilio Portes Gil, now Secretary of Foreign Relations, replies by saying that such an inquiry by the United States "would be tantamount to abolishing the wise policy of the good neighbor."

Secretary Gil is not critical of Senator Borah. The Mexican statement in effect excuses the American Senator by "regretting" that he "should have lent an ear to evil-intentioned versions from quarters inimical to the present regime." Moreover, it sets forth that the Mexican Government "does not for a moment think that he is impelled by even the slightest bias." The position of the Mexican Government is that there have been no persecutions and that freedom of worship is unabridged.

Obviously, this statement of the Mexican Foreign Secretary cannot be reconciled with reports which persist in coming from below the Rio Grande. There are good reasons to believe that in parts of Mexico, at least, worship is not free. Wherever such restrictions exist, they are to be deplored. The American people know the benefits of religious freedom and they regret attempts by other governments to order the religious views of their peoples.

But there is an important difference between having an attitude as a people toward a religious situation and entering into an official investigation of that situation as a government. If the United States Senate should undertake to investigate the Mexican situation, it might find itself requested to investigate the religious situation in Soviet Russia, in Hitlerized Germany, not to mention other countries where the issue of religious freedom has become acute.

Not the least surprising thing about this proposal is the identity of its sponsor. Only last week Senator Borah was opposing the adherence of the United States to the World Court on the ground that it would involve this country in foreign controversies. It would be hard to think of a governmental course which would involve us in more serious international difficulties than that proposed by the Senator from Idaho, if carried out in all its implications.

MR. HANNEGAN AND PERMANENT REGISTRATION.

Chairman Hannegan of the Democratic City Committee thinks the committee will be opposed to the permanent registration bill now pending in the Legislature. Speaking for himself, Mr. Hannegan opposes the bill "because it is impracticable."

Impracticable? The bill is based on permanent registration laws now in force in 23 states, either for certain cities of the state or for state-wide use. It is similar to laws under which such large cities as Detroit, San Francisco, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Los Angeles and Denver register their voters permanently.

Far from finding permanent registration impracticable, these cities and states find it works far more smoothly than the old system. Moreover, it prevents fraud, it ministers to the convenience of voters and it saves money. We call Mr. Hannegan's attention to the fact that, under permanent registration in Milwaukee, it costs an average of 12 cents per year to register a voter, whereas in St. Louis it costs an average of 45 cents.

One of the features of the bill to which Mr. Hannegan objects is the signature requirement. All voters must sign their names when asking for ballots at the polls, in order that the election officials may compare the signature with that on the permanent registration card. Mr. Hannegan fears that this might disfranchise persons who seldom write their names and might vary in their writing. Any handwriting expert will reassure him that there is little danger of that. On the other hand, the signature requirement is an excellent preventive of fraud.

Mr. Hannegan fears the bill would place too much power in an expert supervisor, to be appointed by the Election Board, and that the members of the board would become mere figureheads. That may be an objection to the bill, but it is not an insuperable one. It is one that could be ironed out without imperiling the bill's main objectives.

We fear, however, that the political powers-that-be are not interested in permanent registration. This is not because they are unaware that it is far superior to the costly system now in use. It is because it would deprive them of patronage involved in the appointment of election officials in the 669 precincts, and because of other political objections best known to the politicians themselves, but not voiced.

Permanent registration would save St. Louis between $75,000 and $100,000 a year. It would make it unnecessary for voters to go to the polls to re-register every four years, or whenever they move. It would increase the safeguards against frauds. These are the arguments on which the case for permanent registration rests. Mr. Hannegan has not refuted them.

EVERY INCH A SPENDER.

Lorenzo was lavish, whether he had it or not, and Louis the Grand made the francs fly, and "Coal Oil Johnny" painted the drab nineteenth century a gay, bright red, and "Death Valley Scotty" used to have his purple weeks, and up and down all the nation's Broadways our Princes of Wastrelsy have promenaded. They were all pikers.

Good old Dr. Townsend is the first royal spender to dazzle and delight a cautious world. His annual budget of 24 billion dollars may make economists shudder. It may wrinkle the statesman's brow. It may persuade the rich man that the time is here to put whatever he has left in a little black bag and hike for elsewhere.

That's all right with Dr. Townsend. With a flashlight given him by a fellow named Aladdin, the doctor serenely goes his non-divertible way. Washington may heckle him, but he is determined to give everybody over 60 his quota of $200 a month, regardless of what it costs. As a matter of record, as he told the Ways and Means Committee, he is "not interested in the cost." He doesn't care who produces the base pelf. It is sufficient to him to know that, if the boys and girls in the sixties are handed two billion dollars a month to send careening through the marts, the sun of abundance will blaze in the heavens, the night will be filled with music and the days will dance on merry, tireless toes.

So roll the drum and shrill the fife and blow the bugle, blow!

THE SAFETY GLASS BILL.

The Roads and Highways Committee of the Missouri House has approved a bill that would require all automobiles sold in the State after next Jan. 1 to be equipped with safety glass. It is a measure looking toward public safety, one that has already been adopted in Massachusetts, Michigan and New York, and is scheduled for discussion in the 1935 legislative sessions of 20 other states.

Safety glass, so called because of its construction in layers that prevent shattering, is one of the greatest improvements in the modern automobile. Many makes of cars now have this glass in standard models; in others, it is obtainable at small extra charge.

It is estimated that 45 per cent of all injuries in motor car accidents are caused by flying glass. On this basis, it is computed that use of safety glass in all cars would cause an annual reduction of 350,000 in the number of persons injured in such accidents. Compulsory use of safety glass may be inaugurated without hardship on motor manufacturers and dealers by providing an ample period before it takes effect.

Speaker Christy, sponsor of the Missouri measure, urges as a secondary reason for its passage the fact that it would stimulate business in his home town, Festus, where a glass manufacturer has a plant. The major reason for passage of the bill is, of course, a greater consideration, that of public safety. The employment incidentally provided is a fortunate by-product.

WE GOT RID OF THE MUD. WHY NOT THE SMOKE?

TODAY AND TOMORROW

By Walter Lippmann

What of Louisiana?

THE Constitution says that "the United States shall guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government," and it is open to question whether Louisiana now has a republican form of government.

A very considerable number of the most law-abiding citizens of the State are so thoroughly convinced that representative government has been attacked that they are organizing for resistance. Correspondents of unimpeachable integrity and excellent judgment, like Raymond Gram Swing and F. R. Daniell, have described the Government of Louisiana as a dictatorship, and they have used the term not figuratively and loosely, but in its literal sense. They mean that orderly processes of election, of legislation, of administration and of justice are interrupted, and that physical and mental coercion has overwhelmed government by consent.

It is difficult to say, without fuller knowledge than outsiders now have, whether affairs in Louisiana have actually reached a point where Federal intervention under Article IV, Section 4, of the Constitution is required. The power is not one to be invoked except under the most compelling circumstances. But things have gone quite far enough in Louisiana to warrant very serious consideration of the question by the Federal Government and by the people at large. They have gone far enough to justify preparedness to act should events call for action.

The acid test will be applied when we see how the ruling powers deal with the opposition which is now organizing in Louisiana, and whether a restoration of orderly government is achieved without violence.

• • •

The dictatorship of Senator Long presents a question of principle about which there is a dangerous confusion in the minds of many who believe in democracy. The question is whether men must acquiesce in the overthrow of democracy if the dictator can obtain the support of a majority of the voters.

I believe there can be only one answer to that question. To answer in the affirmative would be to reduce democracy to an absurdity. It would mean that today's majority had the right to deprive tomorrow's majority of its rights. Who can make such a claim?

Who will say that a dictator may use free institutions to destroy free institutions? That a temporary majority may impose its transient will upon all future majorities? That men may use freedom of speech to acquire the power to destroy freedom of speech? That they may use elections to abolish elections? That they may exploit the constitutional guarantees to subvert them?

The idea that a dictatorship may be established by democratic processes is a sophistry. It could be entertained only in an age when men had enjoyed liberty so long that they had forgotten what it means and how it was won.

• • •

One can have respect for dictators who overthrow free institutions by force and frankly say they intend to rule by force. But dictators who were elected, and then pretend to rule by popular consent, though they have destroyed the institutions through which the popular will can express itself freely, are practicing an ugly fraud. And those who acquiesce in the tyranny because it was achieved by majority rule are pretending to be convinced, when in fact they are cowed.

Free institutions are not the property of any majority. They do not confer upon majorities unlimited powers. The rights of the majority are limited rights. They are limited not only by the constitutional guarantees, but by the moral principle implied in those guarantees. That principle is that men may not use the facilities of liberty to impair them. No man may invoke a right in order to destroy it.

The right of free speech belongs to those who are willing to preserve it. The right to elect belongs to those who mean to transmit that right to their successors. The rule of the majority is morally justified only if another majority is free to reverse that rule.

To hold any other view than this is to believe that democracy alone, of all forms of government, is prohibited by its own principles from insuring its own preservation. It is high time that free men repudiated so preposterous a doctrine. There is nothing in the principles of democracy which requires a people to surrender democracy or relieves them of the obligation to defend it.

In many countries of the world today, there are armed bands of men, using the democratic liberties of free assemblage and of free speech to organize for the overthrow of democratic liberties. Is there any doubt that democratic governments have the right to suppress them? If they become strong, that they have the duty to suppress them? That there is no democratic right to destroy democracy and that revolutionists against democracy may be tolerated only if they are so weak as to be negligible?

A free nation can tolerate much, and ordinarily toleration is its best defense. It can tolerate feeble Communist parties and feeble Fascist parties as long as it is certain that they have no hope of success. But once they cease to be debating societies and become formidable organizations for action, they present a challenge which it is suicidal to ignore. They use liberty to assemble force to destroy liberty.

When that challenge is actually offered, when it really exists in the judgment of the sober and the well informed, it is a betrayal of liberty not to defend it with all the power that free men possess.

SENATOR GUFFEY, UNMARRIED.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

PENNSYLVANIA already has obtained distinction in the new Congress. The shortest senatorial biography in the Congressional Directory is that of the junior Senator from this commonwealth. It reads simply: "Joseph F. Guffey, Democrat, Pittsburgh, Pa., unmarried."

Is this modesty on the part of Senator Guffey? His constituents will agree that it would take more than these two lines to tell the story of his adventurous political life. The effect of what he has placed in the official directory is to emphasize the fact that he is a bachelor. If this does not bring him many proposals of marriage, we shall be disappointed in the pulling power of the Congressional Directory.

Code Reform in Missouri

From the Kansas City Times.

IN its advocacy of prompt legislative action for criminal code reform in this State, the Missouri Bar Association is exemplifying the best traditions of the legal profession and is moving to effect a greater measure of public security and respect for the administration of law and justice.

The association, under the leadership of Judge Frank E. Atwood as president and through its executive committee, headed by Leland Hazard of Kansas City, has framed and is now submitting to the Legislature a series of eight bills which would modernize drastically and strengthen materially both the methods and the powers of the courts in dealing with crime.

Several reforms of this nature have been urged by Gov. Park. The bar association program includes these and the eight others in addition. It strikes at weaknesses of criminal practice laws that have become the source of notorious abuses and a means of turning the law to the advantage of the offender rather than society.

Abuses and weaknesses that would be removed include easy bail, resort without advance notice to the plea of insanity or an alibi as defense, the granting of separate trials to defendants jointly charged with crime, the denial of State counsel comment on a defendant's refusal to testify, delays through appeals, change of venue by virtue of "prejudice" and the unequal number of jury challenges by the State. Other reforms would include permission to the State to take depositions in criminal cases and the fingerprinting of all persons arrested on felony charges.

It is understood that not all of these or still other legal reforms would bring an end to organized crime in the State. But they would afford a powerful deterrent to crime.

Repeatedly attempts of this nature have failed in Missouri. The members of the bar, the State administration and the Legislature now have an inviting opportunity to proceed unitedly in ending obsolete and shamefully ineffective procedures that too often have left the law a bulwark of the criminal.

DESIGN FOR AN ACCIDENT.

From the Christian Science Monitor.

TO encourage safer driving among truck drivers along motor highways, a trade journal recently printed some facts based on accident figures that will be instructive to the pleasure motorist as well. When the statisticians adjusted their slide rules, here is the statement they gave:

If you cut out of line of traffic, your chances of having an accident are multiplied by 50.

If you drive over 40 miles an hour, your chances of having an accident are multiplied by 25.

If you pass another car on a curve, your chances of having an accident are multiplied by 21.

If you pass another car going up hill, your chances of having an accident are multiplied by 10.

If you fail to signal a turn or stop, your chances of having an accident are multiplied by 5.

The driver who cuts out of line and drives over 40 miles an hour usually explains afterward that he "was in a hurry." He got a late start and had to make up time, thus endangering his own life and property and those of others. With a ton of motor car and a 75-horsepower motor, he tries to defeat the team of time and the law of averages. "Casey Jones" tried it and won fame. But he survives only in song.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.

ON TOP of the Soviet impasse on debts the State Department has run into another deadlock involving Russia.

This one concerns the American Embassy in Moscow.

American architects have devised plans for a beautiful new edifice modeled after Thomas Jefferson's Monticello. It would look down from a Moscow hilltop. The Soviet Government had donated a choice piece of park for the new embassy.

But now the American architect in charge says that Russian workmanship is not sufficiently skilled to build the embassy. And the State Department is supporting him.

The situation is delicate because the United States Government cannot well go on record against Russian engineers. At the same time it cannot proceed unless it is sure the finished building will pass final inspection tests.

One difficulty is that so much ballyhoo has been given to plans for the building that any failure to proceed cannot escape notice in Russia.

All of which leads the State Department nowhere, and is one reason Ambassador Bill Bullitt wears such a long face these days as he paces the hushed corridors of diplomacy.

Come-Back.

CORDELL HULL, grave Secretary of State, has not forgotten what it is like to be a Congressman, as Elmer Thomas found out the other day in the Agriculture Committee hearings.

The Oklahoma Senator interrupted Hull, who had said something about our trade policies being in the clutch of high-pressure minorities.

"I mean the sort of thing that used to happen to me in the House," Hull snapped back. "Two men sent 50 telegrams to me, and I jumped across the room. I saw that going on for 22 years. And if you stay here that long, you'll see it, too."

Statesmen.

FASCINATING are the antics of certain statesmen in their more personal attitudes—especially when they rush forth to do battle over some lush morsel of patronage.

Only a Moliere with a genius for satire could do justice to the four-hour spectacle staged in the Senate over the appointment of Frank R. McNinch as chairman of the Federal Power Commission.

The North Carolinian is one of the ablest and most enlightened executives in the Government service. In the six years he has been a member of the commission his devotion to public interest has earned him the hatred of utility moguls.

They had personal axes to grind and they ground them unabashed.

Chief grinder was North Carolina's dour Josiah Bailey. In 1928 McNinch bolted Al Smith, an act Bailey has never forgotten nor forgiven. So, for over an hour Bailey harangued the Senate to reject McNinch. But when Senator Burton K. Wheeler, McNinch's backer, suggested a roll call, Bailey practically fell over himself in his eagerness to avoid a showdown.

Another zealous foe was Pat McCarran.

The large-paunched Nevadan leaped to the breastworks with the cry of "unfitness." But what was really eating him was the fact that he had tried to prevail upon McNinch to appoint a McCarran henchman to a job. McNinch had turned him down.

Most hilarious of all was the attitude of North Carolina's junior Senator, Bob Reynolds.

During his campaign he had declared that if elected he would fight for the retirement of McNinch. But as the afternoon wore on, Bob sat in his seat, a silent spectator, giving no indication he desired to say a word.

This was too much for Missouri's Bennett Clark.

Just as confirmation was about to be approved, he rose and with a show of solicitude inquired if Reynolds did not want to give his colleagues the benefit of his views.

Reynolds' colleagues roared with laughter. They knew it was the last thing he wanted to do.

However, he rose. And for the next 15 minutes he delivered one of the most stirring orations the Senate has ever heard—on the beauties of North Carolina's countryside and the "velvety" glories of its highways.

Real Fears.

THERE are genuine fears behind Senate attacks on the $4,800,000,000 relief bill and the tremendous powers it gives to the President.

Under it the President could abolish, reorganize, or consolidate any Government agency by fiat.

This is an unprecedented grant of power. When Hoover sought a mandate nowhere near as sweeping, Congress, then under Republican control, indignantly rebuffed him.

One of the causes for the Senatorial alarm is the whispered report current for some time that certain inner council master minds have a scheme up their sleeves under which the legal staffs of the various Government departments and independent agencies would be brought under the jurisdiction of the Justice Department.

Attorney-General Cumimngs is not credited with being a party to the plan.

Merry-Go-Round.

MISSISSIPPI'S "hell-raising" Senator, Theodore G. Bilbo, is fast getting a reputation for being the mute among the rookies. He keeps his mouth shut not only on the Senate floor, but also in the Agriculture Committee hearings on cotton, his State's principal product. . . . Cherry growers in Wisconsin, asking for a marketing agreement on their product, ask not only a price increase, but also that their product shall no longer be called "red sour cherries." They want the "sour" left out. . . . Uruguayans pronounce the name of their capital Montevi-day-o, but Cordell Hull, mountaineer Secretary of State, declares he prefers to say Monte-vid-eo. . . . There are seven women in Congress; six in the House, one in the Senate. All are widows. . . . When Senator Moore of New Jersey tells a story on himself—only a very innocuous one—his face goes crimson. Blase Washington likes a man who has not lost the ability to blush.

MISS SARAH L. TOWER, FRIEND OF BLIND, DIES

Miss Sarah L. Tower was found dead in bed yesterday at her home, 27 Vandeventer place, by her servants. She was 70 years old, but had not been ill recently.

She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George F. Tower and resided with her parents many years at the old Tower home at 1540 South Grand boulevard. Her father, a manufacturer and real estate operator, was an early contributor to Washington University.

Miss Tower, the last of her family, resided with her sister-in-law, Mrs. George F. Tower Jr., the widow of her only brother. Mrs. Tower is expected to arrive in St. Louis tomorrow from Florida.

Miss Tower was one of the founders of the Missouri Association for the Blind, now the St. Louis Society of the Blind. She was especially interested in aiding blind children, and provided funds for their care and treatment. She was also a contributor to ophthalmological clinics at St. Louis and Washington Universities and at hospitals in the city. Recently she had considered establishing scholarships for students in ophthalmology.

She was a familiar figure at numerous charitable institutions and was known by the patients as well as the officials.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

SPECIMEN STAMPS TO BE AVAILABLE TO COLLECTORS

Postoffice Department Acts to Meet Complaints After House Drops Farley Case.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—After the House decided yesterday by a 275 to 101 vote not to go into Postmaster-General Farley's issuance of special stamps to friends, the Postoffice Department said it would place on sale "through philatelic agency in Washington" imperforate sheets "of all issues of which imperforate 'specimen' or souvenir sheets have already been run, and these will be printed in sufficient numbers to meet the request of all collectors."

Before the vote a letter from Clinton B. Eilenberger, Third Assistant Postmaster-General, was presented. Since Jan. 1, 1933, it said 98 sheets of 200 stamps each, "imperforate and ungummed" as they first came from the press, "have been presented to high Government officials as specimens of new issues."

Eilenberger said that, through "inadvertence," one of the large sheets was sold to a man in Norfolk, Va.; that an attempt had been made to get these back; that Republican administrations had given away stamps and that anyhow the whole affair seemed intended "for purpose of criticism."

She apologized for not bringing up the bill until she heard of a similar measure offered by a woman member of the Indiana Legislature. The Indiana House has approved the bill.

ROLAND HAYES, TENOR, IN ARTISTIC RECITAL

Program of Negro Singer Includes German Lieder and Spirituals.

ROLAND HAYES, the Negro tenor, gave another demonstration of his polished art in a song recital last night at the Municipal Opera House. It was a repetition of his artistic triumphs of other years in St. Louis, and, as before, it was a popular success as well. St. Louis audiences seem to have come to realize that Hayes is more than an ordinary singer, though the possessor of an ordinary voice.

He demonstrated again, in his long and well-chosen program, his faultless technical control and his intelligent interpretation of the subject matter. His opening number was Handel's "Alma Mia" aria but it was in the German lieder which followed that he excelled. Mozart's "Wie Unglueckllch Bin Ich Nit," and P. E. Bach's "Der Fruhling" and "Jesus in Gethsemane" comprised the first group, and each was a perfect example of the singer's style and intellectual and emotional compass.

The same was true of his second group, which included Schubert's "Die Liebe hat Gelogen" and "Der Jungling und Der Quelle;" Alexander Krein's "Nish Tvoi Lik" and Taneieff's "Fontany." It was not until he reached the last number in the third group, however—Rhodes' "When Malindy Sings"—that he called into play all of the splendid resources of his artistry. Here his fine intellect, his control of the vocal dynamics and his varied emotions were combined in as splendid a eprformance as has been heard on a St. Louis concert platform in many a year.

True, his high notes are bad, his throat is obviously constricted in forte passages, his tones are pinched and occasionally harsh, and only the possessor of unusual artistic gifts would be able to overcome these seemingly unsurmountable obstacles to popular success. Thus, Hayes proved himself again a great artist rather than a great singer.

The other numbers in the group were Faure's "Le Secret," Debussy's "Mandolin," and Coleridge Taylor's "Dawn." His closing group, as usual, was composed of Negro spirituals which, artistically, were not up to the standard the singer set in his singing of the lieder.

It does not seem reasonable that a Negro should be a master of German music and an unsatisfactory singer of spirituals, but that is true in the case of Hayes. Too much exaggeration is his fault in this type of music. He seems, however, to have toned down the melodrama with which he invested the spirituals in his last program here, and thereby improved their quality greatly.

DISORDERS MARK ANNIVERSARY OF RIOTING IN PARIS

slowly passed the spot facing the Chamber of Deputies, across the River Seine, they reverently laid their floral offerings in a heap.

By mid-afternoon the procession to the Place de la Concorde had dwindled and squads of police moved up to the fountain. Forming a line around it, they afterward admitted, one by one, only those who came with flowers. The crowds of curious were kept moving several yards away.

Flandin refused a request of the February 6 Association, organization of those widowed, orphaned and wounded in the disturbances, that the Place de la Concorde be closed today as a mark of respect for the victims.

Communists Call Meeting.

Organized war veterans joined with the Association of Victims of February 6 in promising to keep the peace, but a veterans' manifesto declared their campaign against "political corruption" would be unceasing. Asserting that the million members of the National Union of Veterans were dissatified with the Government's "inadequate" efforts to cleanse France politically, the manifesto said "nothing will stop us."

(The 1934 rioting, following the Stavisky scandal, caused the downfall of the Cabinet of Premier Daladier. In addition to the 19 killed, 800 were injured in the fighting.)

From his Belgian exile the Count of Paris, the Royalists' "crown prince," telegraphed his followers of the "King's Henchmen" organization that "on this bloody anniversary, one of your members has given his life for the salvation of the country." He referred to the death of a young monarchist at the hands of a man referred to as a Communist. The alleged assailant, charged with beating him to death during a demonstration Monday, was held in prison.

Another broadside against the Government came from the "Croix Du Feu," veterans' organization. It charged Flandin has been unable to choose between "the Red flag and the tri-color."

Do as your dentist does—

USE POWDER

DR. LYON'S TOOTH POWDER

- 100% Cleansing Properties Twice that of tooth paste
- Contains No Grit or Pumice Cannot possibly scratch the softest enamel
- Outlasts Tooth Paste 2 to 1

THERE is nothing known that will clean and polish teeth so quickly and leave them so gleaming white—as POWDER.

That is why your dentist, when cleaning your teeth, as you know—always uses powder.

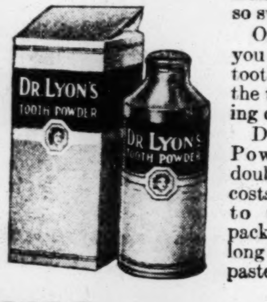
As it is only the powder part of any dentifrice that cleans, a dentifrice that is ALL POWDER—just naturally cleans best.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is ALL POWDER—100% cleansing properties. This is more than twice the cleansing properties of tooth pastes.

Dentists everywhere recommend Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, because—teeth simply cannot remain dull and film coated when it is used.

Dr. Lyon's cleans off all stains and polishes the teeth in a harmless and practical way that leaves them sparkling—many shades whiter. Free from all grit or pumice, Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder cannot possibly scratch, or injure the softest enamel.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder keeps your teeth REALLY CLEAN and clean teeth mean—firm, healthy gums and the least possible tooth decay. Powder leaves your teeth feeling so much cleaner, your mouth so refreshed, and your breath so sweet and pure.



Once you use powder you will never go back to tooth paste. People by the thousands are changing daily.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is not only doubly efficient, but it costs only half as much to use. Even a small package lasts twice as long as a tube of tooth paste.

Dr. LYON'S TOOTH POWDER

WHITENS TEETH AS NOTHING ELSE CAN

TELEPHONE RATE INQUIRY URGED ON THE SENATE

I. C. C. Committee Recommends Investigation of Financial Set-Up of A. T. & T.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb.. 6—The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee recommended to the Senate yesterday an investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and an expansion of the regulatory powers of the Federal Trade Commission. Wheeler (Dem.), Montana, is chairman.

An appropriation of $750,000 was proposed by the committee to permit the communications Commission to investigate the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and affiliated corporations, under authority like that given to the Trade Commission for its six-year inquiry into power companies.

Wheeler also will ask his committee for an investigation of railroad financing and will propose Government ownership of the railroads.

The telephone inquiry was proposed in a resolution introduced by Wheeler. It would direct the communications commission to investigate the following points:

Corporate and financial history, including whether the capital structure permits evasion of taxation, or concealment of profits.

Extent and character of inter-company service and contracts, including the cost of equipment and its effect on the rate base of operating companies.

Reasons for "the failure generally to reduce telephone rates and charges during the years of declining prices" and the extent to which subscribers have borne the cost of research and inventions.

Would Include Radio.

Effect of "monopolistic control" on telephone rates and service on independent companies, and with respect to radio broadcasting and public speaker "hook-ups."

Accounting methods, and valuation of properties for rate-making purposes.

Methods of competition with other companies, including determination of whether there has been refusal to buy from or sell to competing companies, suppression of patents, expansion into other fields including teletype service, telephoto service, telegraph service, broadcasting, motion picture production and distribution, manufacture of electrical equipment.

Whether the companies "have sought through propaganda or the expenditure of money or the control of channels of publicity to influence or control public opinion, legislative or administrative action, or elections."

The committee reported favorably to the Senate a bill recommended by the trade commission to give it broad power to prohibit "unfair or deceptive acts and practices," aimed particularly at false advertising. The commission's powers, now limited to unfair competition in interstate commerce, would also be extended to practices "affecting" interstate commerce.

Explaining the purpose of the trade commission bill approved by the committee, William T. Kelley, chief counsel of the commission, said "What the commission had in mind was to prohibit false advertising, even though it was not in a legal sense unfair competition."

He added that "a lot of abuses" had been found in the chain store industry that could not be reached because of restrictions in the law. The trade commission asked Congress for expanded power in making its report on a study of chain stores.

JURY INVESTIGATES CHARGES OF GRAFT IN TEXAS PWA WORK

Willacy County Project Under Inquiry Following Complaint by Ickes.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—A Texas PWA project which is being investigated by a special District of Columbia grand jury was identified today by United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett as one in Willacy County, north of Brownsville.

At the same time Garnett announced H. W. Cole, president of the California Redwood Association, and L. C. Hammond, vice-president of the Hammond Lumber Co., San Francisco, had been subpenaed to appear before the grand jury which was impaneled today to investigate charges of graft on the Texas project.

Garnett said the charges, made by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, concerned contracts for piping and grew out of an attempt to eliminate competition in bidding for wooden piping to be used in the irrigation ditches. The cost of the project is $4,843,000. The first three witnesses were Frank J. Breckenser, Virgil P. Wallace and Chester Kirberg, special PWA agents.

DOLLAR-A-DAY MAN FINDS $42,000 IN SECURITIES

New York Sign Carrier Not Perturbed Over Possibility He May Not Get Reward.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Frank Greges, a dollar-a-day advertising sign carrier who found $42,000 in negotiable securities in a gutter, is not perturbed over a report he might go unrewarded. "Oh, what's the difference. They didn't belong to me," he commented.

Greges was walking along Broad and Wall streets carrying his sign advertising a passport photograph studio, when he saw the black leather wallet containing the securities. He picked it up. Ignoring the pedestrians who wanted to know what he had found, Greges set out for the nearest policeman. Between them they took the bonds to the police station, where it was found they belonged to Belden & Co., brokers.

The bonds were valued at $42,000 by the company, but worth about $3000 more according to Monday's market prices. The company was grateful, but said a reward, if any, must come from the surety company which bonds the firm.

PROTESTS AGAINST SEIZURE OF TEXAN'S LAND IN MEXICO

Senator Connally Asks Ambassador Daniels "to Adopt Aggressive Measures."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Senator Connally (Dem.), Texas, protested to Ambassador Josephus Daniels at Mexico, D. F., yesterday against the reported confiscation by "agrarians" in Tamaulipas, Mexico, of property of United States' citizens.

He complained specifically of the recent seizure of a 4200-acre ranch belonging to John Fernandez, Brownsville (Texas) banker, which is less than five miles from the border. Connally charged that the Mexican Governemnt was "permitting agrarians to appropriate and confiscate" the plantation.

"This plantation," he said, "is in a high state of cultivation and is protected by dikes constructed at heavy cost. . . . The State Department advises that it has communicated with you respecting the matter and requested your strong protests to the Mexican Government. I take the liberty to strongly urge you to adopt aggressive measures with respect to this property. Otherwise, it will be but the forerunner of a multitude of similar aggressions."

RADICALISM REPORT ASSAILS CLEVELAND EDUCATED 'PINKS'

Editors, Clergymen, Judges and Teachers Are Targets in Statement by Survey Group.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 6.—Intellectual "pinks," some of them editors, clergymen, attorneys and Judges, were targets in a report yesterday by a "Secret Seven" committee which has been surveying radicalism in Cleveland for five years. The report did not give any names.

The work of the "Secret Seven," sponsored by the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, was disclosed in a 10-page statement which singled out as the most dangerous element reformers who were described as champions of "the virtuous state, whose sole motive shall be social justice.

"These eloquent prophets of the better day speak under the most respectable sponsorship," the report said. "It is educated sponsorship. It is the sponsorship of institutions of higher learning. It is the sponsorship of certain Protestant clergymen, Jewish rabbis and Catholic priests. This type of person has been present in every revolution of the 'masses against the classes.'"

Dr. Lee, I'm almost frantic with indigestion. Will XR yeast help?

595 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK, N. Y.
DR. R. E. LEE
DIRECTOR

Dear Mr.

I am quite sure that the stomach distress you describe calls for a physician's attention rather than for the haphazard "dosing" you have followed.

Your doctor might well advise that you eat the new XR Yeast, since physicians all over the world are employing this new discovery to counteract indigestion.

Being far stronger than any previous yeast, it greatly stimulates digestive juices and muscles. This action frequently has the additional advantage of relieving other troubles associated with indigestion—such as pimples, headaches, tiredness and constipation.

Very truly yours,

R E Lee
DR. R. E. LEE

If your stomach bothers you, read why leading physicians call this stronger XR Yeast "the foremost new method of correcting indigestion"

A SHORT TIME AGO the medical world was astonished by the results of clinical tests on a new yeast.

Today millions have already sought its benefits.

Unlike most "doses" that people take for indigestion, XR Yeast tones up your entire digestive tract.

Then your food is kept softer, does you more good, is moved through you more swiftly.

Your appetite is better, you don't feel distressed after meals. Your elimination is regular. You have more energy, a better appearance.

Won't you start right now to eat 3 cakes of Fleischmann's XR Yeast every day? You can get it at grocers, restaurants, soda fountains. It is rich in Vitamins A, B, D and G. (As good as ever for baking, too.) Discontinue laxatives gradually. Keep on eating it at least 30 days!

SMALL DECLINE IN GRAIN LIST ON LOCAL BOARD

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Feb. 6.—Grain futures showed small price recessions at the close today, after a rather narrow range. The action of Liverpool tended to depress prices.

Winnipeg wheat opened unchanged to ⅛c up. At one time later it was off ⅛c. The close was ⅛@¼c net lower.

Liverpool came unchanged to ⅛d up in one cable after opening ¼c better. The close was ¼ to ½d net lower.

WHEAT CLOSES UNCHANGED TO LOWER AT CHICAGO

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—Deepening of the shadow of gold clause cases did much to restrict grain business today, and served as a drag on wheat values.

A sustaining influence nevertheless was increased attention given to the fact that this is the season for a beginning of high winds southwest, especially in Western Kansas and Oklahoma and parts of the Texas Panhandle. Fears were expressed regarding prospective consequent crop impairment as a result of soft drifting.

Wheat closed nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜ lower; May, 94⅜@94½; corn, ¼ off to ¼ up, May 82⅜@82½; oats unchanged to ⅛ down, and provisions at 2 cents to 7 cents advance.

Continued waiting for a gold decision had a fresh bearish influence. Opening ⅛@½ lower, May 94¼-⅜, Chicago wheat afterward held near this range. Corn started ⅛@⅝ off, May 82-82⅛, and subsequently altered little.

Cable said weakness of wheat quotations at Liverpool was due to cheaper offerings from Canada and Argentina. Bears in Chicago questioned whether there had as yet been a downward reaction sufficient to make grains underprices, and to lay a foundation for stronger markets. It was contended that not until the United States Government estimate of livestock of farms was available, probably about the middle of next week, would there be a sound basis for determining price possibilities in the grain futures market.

Some moisture reports today in domestic grain territory southwest and west served as more or less of an incentive to sellers of wheat. In addition, forecasts pointed to warmer temperatures in that region.

On the other hand, a steadying influence was that hog and cattle prices were asserted to be approaching again the point where feeding of corn and oats appeared profitable.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 13,716,000 bushels, corn 8,057,000. Open interest in wheat was 101,011,000 bushels, and in corn 63,536,000.

Deposits made by unsuccessful bidders shall be returned to them when the property is struck off. The full amount of the accepted bid shall be paid within 90 days after the confirmation of the sale. It shall be paid in cash, or in cash and receiver's certificates, or in cash and claims against the receiver growing out of his operation of the railroad, or in cash and claims against the Railway Company, but such certificates or claims shall only be accepted for the respective amounts of their distributable share of the proceeds of the sale, based on the priorities of such certificates and claims as adjudicated in said decree.

Upon the confirmation of the sale, all the right, title, interest and equity of redemption of the defendant, and of any person claiming by, through or under the defendant or the receiver, shall be forever foreclosed and barred, and the purchaser shall take and hold the property free and clear of any and all judgments, liens or claims of whatever nature which have accrued or are then outstanding against the Railway Company or the receiver. The bond shall be answerable only for such a proportion of the reserved claims, if such claims be allowed, as would equal the distributable share payable on such claims out of the proceeds of the sale of the property according to the priorities as adjudicated by said decree.

The proceeds of the sale herein directed to be made shall be paid to the receiver, for such distribution, according to the priorities as fixed in said decree as the Court may order.

STOCK LIST STILL SHOWS DROWSINESS; LOWER DRIFT

Decided Inclination to Hold Up Transactions Until the Gold Clause Decision Is Known Is Evident in Market.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Stocks slid lower in another listless market today. Losses of fractions to more than a point were numerous at the finish. The closing tone was heavy. sales approximated 540,000 shares.

Midweek business news gave Wall street something to think about other than the forthcoming gold decision. The rise in steel operations appeared to be levelling off, and power production was reported to have declined more than seasonally for last week. Two large chain store systems reported January sales a little under last year.

U. S. Steel and Bethlehem declined major fractions, then recovered partially, but most of the list finished near the lowest. Rails were heavy, and motors were uniformly under pressure. Issues losing a point or more included American Telephone, Union Pacific, Delaware & Hudson, Johns-Manville, American Commercial Alcohol, and a few others. Issues off fractionally included General Motors, Chrysler, Hudson, Montgomery Ward, Sears, Case, International Harvester, Woolworth, Public Service of New Jersey, Santa Fe, American Smelting, Alaska Juneau, New York Central and others. Archer Daniels was firm, in response to a 25-rent extra dividend, and Liggett & Myers "B" rose a point.

Exchange Rates Better.

Cotton futures at New York closed unchanged to 5 cents a bale lower. Wheat futures at Chicago finished unchanged to off ⅜ of a cent a bushel, and corn closed off ¼ to up ¼.

Principal foreign currencies improved a little. French francs ruled .00⅜ of a cent higher at 6.56⅝ cents, and sterling ¼ higher at $4.88½. The Belgian belga and the Dutch guilder, however, were under moderate pressure, and the Canadian dollar ruled 1-16 lower at 99⅞ cents.

News of the Day.

Telephone turned heavy following overnight news of approval by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee of an appropriation of $750,000 for further investigation. Some time ago, however, American Telephone officials said the company had nothing to conceal and welcomed the investigation.

Rails, both bonds and stocks, seemed somewhat upset by recent earnings statements, and apprehension in one quarter as to administration's transportation program. President Roosevelt said at his press conference today, nevertheless, that the administration had not changed its program of making loans to weak roads.

Cotton Barter Deal Dead.

The statement of President Roosevelt that the German cotton barter deal is dead confirmed Wall street's opinion. Some time ago, when the negotiations got under way, a few sections held high hopes that a satisfactory arrangement might be worked out. Both American and German negotiators were known to be eager to consummate the deal. In the first place, it was recognized that exports of American cotton had been falling sharply under last year's totals. At the same time, it was known that Germany was keen to secure substantial amounts of the American staple. It had been hoped that American cotton might be exchanged with Germany for 25 per cent cash and 75 per cent goods. These proposals ran into the question of whether goods brought in from Germany would come under the anti-dumping clause. It is understood in Wall street that the deal was scotched by opponents who were of this opinion. Securities markets customarily keep a sharp eye on cotton as a market influence. Had any such barter arrangement been made, thereby improving the cotton export position, cotton would probably have bucked up.

Weekly Trade Summaries.

Wall street noted a cautious tone in the weekly report of "Iron Age." The review said, "though additional increases in production are looked for in certain centers, notably Chicago and the valleys, there are indications that the upswing in mill operations is losing momentum."

Mills producing automobile steels are running virtually at capacity, while steel demand from miscellaneous sources is expanding steadily, it was stated.

Further significant expansion in raw steel production is believed to be dependent on bookings of steel for railroads, construction and pipe. three divisions which have lagged recently.

Production of electricity in the week ended Feb. 2 gained 7.7 per cent over the corresponding week last year, the Edison Electric Institute reported. This compared with an advance of 10.7 per cent in the preceding week.

STEEL PRODUCTION UP, SAYS 'IRON AGE'

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—"Steel production has registered another gain, rising from 56 to 56½ per cent of capacity, and scrap prices, though manifesting mixed tendencies, are on the average stronger than in recent weeks," says the Iron Age. "The Pittsburgh ingot rate is up three points to 45 per cent of capacity and operations in the Cleveland-Lorain district have advanced two points to 69 per cent. In the valleys the falling in of several open-hearths has resulted in a temporary recession of two points to 61 per cent. Elsewhere prroduction is substantially unchanged. At Detroit, where output is at 100 per cent of capacity, one producer has so depleted its bank of ingots that it has been compelled to buy a round tonnage of semi-finished steel in the open market."

"Though additional increases in production are looked for in certain centers, notably Chicago and the valleys, there are indications that the upswing in mill operations is losing momentum. Mills producing automobile steels are now operating virtually at capacity and, though tin mill output has risen to 75 per cent and steel demand from miscellaneous sources is showing a steady growth, further significant expansion in raw steel production is believed to be dependent on bookings of railroad steel, construction material and pipe which have been laggards in the recent buying movement.

"Although output may soon level off, no early recession is looked for. In fact, steel makers are now predicting that the present rate will be maintained well through the current quarter provided there are no serious labor disturbances. They also point out that, with four or five months of operations at current levels, activity would spread to other lines. Even now expansion in miscellaneous lines has assumed sizeable proportions. A number of tractor plants in the Middle West have bookings warranting capacity operations for the next six months. Farm implement makers have the best prospects since 1930. Agricultural demand for sheets and wire products has shown notable improvement. Stove manufacturers are running at a high rate. These and other non-automotive outlets for steel are estimated to have accounted for 35 to 50 per cent of the bulge in demand which has developed in the past two months.

"The labor outlook has been brightened by the settlement of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. strike, and by the results of employe elections in automobile plants.

"The gold clause case has checked iron and steel demand in certain districts, though it has not affected the buying policy of the motor car industry. With makers of cold-finished sheets booked full for this quarter, automobile makers are pressing for contracts for second quarter, though under the code prices for that period cannot be filed until Feb. 20.

"The confidence of the iron and steel industry in sustained operations is indicated by the record-breaking gain in pig iron output in January. Total production for the month was 1,477,336 tons, compared with 1,027,622 tons in December. The daily rate, at 47,656 tons, showed an increase of 43.8 per cent over the December average of 33,149 tons. Eighty-nine furnaces were in blast Feb. 1, a net gain of 20 over Jan. 1. January 1920 showed a net gain of 28 furnaces but the increase in daily rate was only 14.5 per cent. In January, 1925, there was a net increase of 23 furnaces, but the daily average rose only 12 per cent over the previous month.

"Rail orders placed by the Southern Pacific, the Burlington and Wheeling & Lake Erie total 44,374 tons.

"Structural steel awards of 16,600 tons are the largest with one exception since the last week of November. New projects of 16,150 tons compare with 9400 tons in the previous week and 16,150 tons a fortnight ago. Sheet steel piling inquiries total 6300 tons. Tentative barge work in the Chicago district calls for 15,000 tons of plates.

"Significant changes in iron and steel prices for the coming quarter are considered unlikely. The "Iron Age" composite prices for pig iron and finished steel are unchanged at $17.90 a ton and 2.124c a lb. respectively. The scrap composite remains at $12.17 a ton for the second week."

New York Sugar.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Raw sugar was quiet early today and no fresh business was reported. The tone was steady, with refiners still interested at last paid prices of 2.85 for sugar in suitable positions, but holders were asking slightly higher levels.

Futures opened at a decline of one point, under scattered over-night liquidation, and selling by producing interests. Offerings were readily absorbed, however, and after the call the market firmed up on increased covering and new outside buying promoted by the continued steadiness of the spot market.

In the old contracts May advanced from 1.91 to 1.92 and September from 2.04 to 2.06, while in the new May sold at 1.95 and September from 2.02 to 2.04, or unchanged to a point above the previous close. The market at mid-day held around the best prices.

Refined sugar locally was unchanged at 4.30 for fine granulated. Some of the out-of-town refiners are expected to advance prices 15 points at the close tonight to 4.45.

The market eased near the close on realizing, futures closing easy, 1 to 3 lower; sales 8950 tons. March 1.89b; May 1.94b; July 1.99b; September 2.04b; December 2.10b; January 2.09b.

HOUSE TO VOTE ON BILL TO CUT TAX PENALTIES

Legislators Override Committee, 95 to 38, in Calling Up Refund Measure.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 6.—A bill providing for remission or partial remission of penalties on delinquent real estate and personal property taxes was brought to the floor of the House today after the House Committee on Taxation and Revenue had voted to kill the bill.

The House's action overrode the committee's decision and a final vote on the measure will be taken later. The vote to consider the bill was 95 to 38. The St. Louis members, except Representative Brinkman, voted against the motion.

The measure, introduced by Representative Daily of Phelps County, provided for remission of all penalties if the taxes were paid prior to June 30, 75 per cent if paid before Aug. 31, 50 per cent if paid before Oct. 31 and 25 per cent if paid Dec. 31. The provisions of the bill would become void after Dec. 31.

City Counselor Hay of St. Louis and Robert E. Hannegan, the city's legislative agent, appeared before the committee last week in opposition to the bill. They said its passage would delay receipt of tax revenue needed to operate the city government.

Many rural members of the House spoke in favor of the bill today. Among them was Representative Rainwater of Polk County, who said, "If we do nothing else in this session, we ought to pass this bill."

Representative Bennett of Dent County said, "Many people will be able to save their homes if they are given another year to catch up on their taxes. I believe it is our duty to give them this chance."

Representative Hudson of Gentry County, a retired farmer, said he thought the farmers "ought to be given a chance to catch up on taxes and get themselves back on their feet."

The only speaker in opposition was Representative Hess of St. Louis, who mentioned the city's need of revenue and said he believed "people who failed to pay their taxes within the required time should pay the penalties."

SHIP FIRM HIRED BROTHER OF DENBY, NAVY SECRETARY

"Since the Government was asked to pay the bill and 10 per cent profit for giving the party," interrupted Clark, "it ought to be a bright picture." The conversation referred to war-time periods.

Unruffled, Parker went on to explain that "demijohns of liquor were placed right alongside the coal pits on these trial cruises, so the men could have their drink."

He said no liquor parties were held on naval ships, but he added that on shipping board vessels, "Senators, Congressmen and other officials were invited."

"Part in Defense Scheme."

"You considered that part of the national defense scheme," Clark pursued. "It had a part in it," Parker answered, continuing: "It was the first time many Senators from the West ever saw a big ship."

"You think if a party is given them," Clark asked, "they will be more receptive to shipbuilding appropriations?" "They would know more about ships," Parker said.

"They certainly would know more about shipbuilding," Clark concluded.

Parker described the Vinson (big navy) act as a "cost plus" measure, but conceded it "carries no guarantee" of profit to the builder under the type of contract it provided. He declared the Vinson act limited profits but did not limit losses. "It's like a poker game," he added. "You share all your winning hands and your losing hands are your own."

Swanson Doesn't Object.

Meanwhile, Secretary Swanson said the State Department made no objection to "shakedown" cruises to Brazil of two new navy vessels, the heavy cruiser Tuscaloosa and the aircraft carrier Ranger.

Rear Admiral William H. Standley, chief of operations, acknowledged, however, that the New York Shipbuilding Corporation had asked that the vessels be sent.

Swanson insisted that the visit, made last year, had no connection with attempts of the company to secure Government contracts from Brazil.

A report by Clinton L. Bardo, former president of the corporation, put in the record today by the committee, said that under his direction a saving of $3,620,000 under estimated costs had been made on three cruisers.

"Just More Velvet."

"That is in addition to generous profits allowed in the contract," Clark asked Parker. Parker said the profit allowed was not excessive.

"But this was just more velvet," Clark continued, referring to the $3,620,000 saving. "Yes," Parker said. "That is velvet."

"How is it that while this saving was being made," Senator Bone (Dem.), Washington, asked, "Prices were almost doubling?" "They were not doubling in the New York Shipbuilding Co. bids," Parker answered.

Clark stepped in to assert costs to the navy had mounted from $8,000,000 a ship two years ago to $16,000,000. "Not in our yards," said Parker.

"Can you explain the rise," Bone asked. "Wow it occurred in other yards—let them defend themselves," Parker said.

Idle Acres, Idle Men.
Cowry, Wampum or Gold?
Tell This to Franklin.
American Type Killing.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.

(Copyright, 1935.)

CHARLESTON, S. C., Feb. 5.

TEN MILLION idle men and more in the United States. Ten million idle acres and more on either side of this railroad running along the Atlantic Coast from Southern Florida to New York. Two of the acres, intensively cultivated, would feed a family. Texas alone, under intensive cultivation, could feed the entire population of the earth as it exists now, and oil underneath Texas would run all the automobiles. There is an empire for you, in one single state.

And we talk about "over-population" with so much land not used, and none of it used with full intelligence.

Big question of the day: "What will the Supreme Court decide about the gold clause?"

If you saw two collections of savages discussing the merit of cowry shells compared with wampum as money, you would say "poor savages." What are we but "poor savages," worrying about the metalic or paper symbols of wealth, not realizing that earth plus intelligent use of power is the real wealth, and the symbols unimportant.

The Townsend plan, $200 a month to everybody 60 years of age, is solemnly discussed by Congress, which ought to be passing a sound, reasonable, old-age pension now. The Townsend plan is an interesting plan in many ways. By taxation of every transaction, on producer, jobber, wholesaler, retailer, manufacturer, buyer, it would practically absorb all available money to turn it over to deserving, or otherwise, persons, aged 60. It would soon become necessary for some other Townsend to organize a $200-a-month plan for all paupers. There would soon be twice as many paupers as there are people 60 years old.

Benjamin Franklin, supposed to have some brains, would learn with surprise about that Townsend plan arranged to promote extravagance and waste, saying to each 60-year-old person:

"You will get $200 every month, and you must spend it immediately, within the month. No, you may not save some of it to help your grandson through college, or to provide for your granddaughter in her next childbirth."

That plan to provide automatically for national impoverishment, substituting silly, senile spending on a gigantic scale for old-fashioned thrift, is actually discussed by the Congress of the United States, and millions of Americans favor the idiocy.

No wonder we drift into depression and have millions idle.

Angels above must smile sadly considering what has been given to the American people, and what a muddle they make of it.

Chicago reports the latest "American type" murder. Thomas E. Maloy, veteran head of Chicago's Motion Picture Operators' Union, was killed in the usual way, as he sat at the wheel of his automobile.

The Government says Mr. Maloy's career as a "union labor leader" was profitable. He had been indicted and released under $10,000 bail on a charge of failure to report $350,000 income before the assassin's "slugs" canceled that and other accusations.

If the leader of a motion picture union got that income, you wonder how and from whom they got it, also what other motion picture operators who got no such amount think about it.

In addition to income tax difficulties, Mr. Maloy had been questioned in connection with three killings, one of a man expelled from the union and later killed in Mr. Maloy's office. Since the man is dead, it is necessary to emphasize the fact that nothing had been proved against him when one "automatic" and one shotgun "brought instant death."

Fortunately, not everybody in the United States is "under water," as bankers put it, meaning "insolvent."

The Lord tempers the wind to the plucked goose. In 15 days the Miami race track took $4,000,000 through its betting machinery, besides other millions in admissions. Dog races, at night, took what was left, and crowds continue to pour southward.

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 5.

HOLLYWOOD is surely becoming the pre-war Vienna of the world. Everyone comes here. One of the latest and most interesting arrivals is Geza Herczeg, author of "Wonderbar." Mr. Herczeg arrived from Budapest to write for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and his first assignment is an original musicale of his own called "The Magic Violin" which is intended for Mady Christians. Miss Christians is a talented actress, although her first American picture gave her no chance to prove what she can do.

Mady Christians

Hoot Gibson, cowboy actor who has been traveling all over the country making personal appearances with June Gale (who is said to be secretly married to him) is finally returning to the screen. He'll make his debut in "Sunset Trail" with Mary Doran, talented young actress, as his leading lady.

Puzzle.

All the talk that Carl Laemmle Jr. will get his talent for his pictures away from Universal, has put James Whale in a funny position. Whale has been set to direct "Show Boat" from the time Universal started to remake it for the talkies. Junior plans to follow "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" with "Show Boat" as his second picture and so Hollywood is asking what about James Whale? What happens to him? Not a thing. He directs, according to those concerned, and remains with Junior.

Letter-Box.

Had fascinating letter from Anna May Wong, the little Chinese girl who was born in Los Angeles. She is taking her one act play into various European theaters. Her letter was sent from Venice and, most surprising of all, Anna May presented her sketch in Italian while she was in Italy. She will visit Denmark, Switzerland and France, returning to England for a picture in June. It's something to be a race horse belonging to a film star, because it means it will get into the movies sooner or later. Be'erly Hills, Clark Gable's famous horse, and Rattlebrain, Constance Bennett's recent purchase, will face the camera for Pete Smith in a short to be made at Santa Anita race track. Pete who makes those clever shorts with his pithy monologue for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, plans to film the two horses when they run the same day.

Smiles.

Chatter in Hollywood: Al Rogell, whose sob story was printed in all the newspapers at the time he decided to divorce pretty Blonde Ena Rogell, his wife, has a new heart throb. His buddies are saying that Al, so disconsolate a few months ago, is full of joy and smiles these days. The lady is Betty Burke and she comes from the South and I am told she is not only very easy to look at but that she has plenty of money. Of course, Al cannot get married again for a year but a year goes by quickly.

Snapshots.

Fannie Brice in her old stride, getting a riotous welcome from her Hollywood friends at the "Ziegfeld Follies'" opening; the audience, composed largely of film celebrities, enjoying both Fannie and Willie and Eugene Howard, and laughed heartily at their quips; Paulette Goddard lovely in a purple gown, sitting near the front with Charlie Chaplin who seemed to be having fun; the Samuel Goldwyns brought Constance Collier and Albert Kaufman; Billie Burke escorted by Louis B. Mayer and Adrian, the Otto Krugers and everyone remained until the final curtain; the Wesley Ruggles opening their new home with a buffet supper; some of their guests arrived after the "Follies;" the M. H. Aylesworths here from New York, Edgar Allan Woolf, the Frank Morgans and Ethel Butterworth among the late arrivals; Mary Brian now knows what an auto camp is like; she and her mother caught in the fog on their way home from Palm Spring, spent the night there; no hotels for miles; Dolores Del Rio and Cedric Gibbons entertaining Prince Charles D' Arenberg.

Without Their Lids

When putting away pots and pans after using, remove their lids and let the inside have a chance to air. Pots and pans put away with their lids tightly on are very apt to retain the odor of the food last cooked in them.

An Easy Count Of Hand Makes Contract Easy

By P. Hal Sims

IT is true that on some occasions an elaborate count of the opponents' hands is unnecessary. East may have four diamonds, and West three, or vice versa, for all you care. You still have to guess which hand holds the queen. But in today's deal, a count of the West hand is very simple—and enables South to make five no trumps with perfect safety.

♠ A K J x x
♥ 3 2
♦ 10 9 8 7
♣ A 9

(None) NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH (None)

♠ 6 5
♥ Q J 4
♦ A K Q 3
♣ K J 6 2

The bidding:

North.	South.
1 Sp.	2 N. T. (1)
3 N. T.	Pass.

1. South places the declaration in the ten-ace hand immediately.

West opened a low heart. South didn't like that lead. Give West five hearts to the ace king, and South can't afford to try to make any overtricks. In match point duplicate, overtricks are important. Moreover, if West holds four diamonds to the jack, South may go down at his contract.

East went up with the king of hearts, and played a small heart back. West won with the ace, and returned a third round of the suit. East showed out. Thus, it became clearly evident that West had led originally from a six-card suit.

Since East's hand is not dangerous, South can try a first-round spade finesse. The jack holds the trick. All follow on the lead of the ace, but East shows out, when the kind is led. Four more cards are placed in West's original hand—four spades, headed by the queen. Through the simple process of logic we may now state definitely that West held, and still holds, for that matter, only three cards in the minor suits. The question is whether he has two diamonds and one club; one diamond and two clubs; or, more primitively, three clubs or three diamonds. West follows when the ace and king of diamonds are led, but throws a small heart on the queen. Ergo, he has one club. The ace of clubs is played from dummy. When the queen does not drop, East may be finessed for that card with perfect safety.

Milk
Cornflakes with Sliced Bananas
Sugar and Top Milk

Meat Loaf for 20 Servings.

Two pounds of beef
One pound of fresh pork
One pound of veal
Three ground carrots
One ground onion
Two ground unpeeled potatoes.

Grind the meat and mix thoroughly with the ground vegetables. Season with salt, pepper and if liked a little sage. Form into a loaf. Dredge with flour. In the baking pan place a small amount of drippings and quickly brown the loaf in a hot oven. Reduce heat and during the cooking add water as needed so as to form a gravy. Cook about an hour and a quarter to an hour and a half.

Apricot and Prune Jelly.

Soak one pound each of apricots and prunes. Cook together in the water in which they were soaked, slowly, for about an hour. Drain and press through a sieve. Soak two tablespoons of gelatin in a little cold water and dissolve in two cups of the heated liquid from the prunes and apricots. Add the juice of one lemon and one-half cup of sugar. Stir until the gelatin is dissolved and cool, then fold in the fruit pulp. Set aside to harden. Serve, topped with a little sweetened whipped cream.

Vegetable Soup.

Brown a large beef shank that is free from all fat. Place in a large soup kettle, cover with water and let slowly come to a boil and let simmer, adding two-thirds cup of barley, for two hours. Coarsely grind four cups of minced mixed vegetables and add to soup and let simmer two hours longer. Season to taste.

Peanut Butter and Bacon Sandwiches.

Thinly slice whole-wheat bread and butter lightly. Make a filling by mixing one cup of peanut butter with enough cream or milk to spread, adding two tablespoons of any kind of jam and one-fourth cup of crisp chopped bacon.

Meat Roll.

Cook six medium sized potatoes in boiling salted water until tender. Drain well and shake dry. Wash, adding one-half cup of hot milk in which a lump of butter has been melted. Salt and pepper. Beat until very smooth. Season three pounds of beef, which has been ground with a little additional suet, with two tablespoons of grated onion, three tablespoons of salt, two tablespoons of worcestershire sauce (optional), one-half teaspoon of pepper and two slightly beaten eggs. Butter a piece of waxed paper and on this pat out the meat one-half inch thick. Form the mashed potato into a roll and place in center of meat. Wrap the meat around the potato roll, overlapping edge and press firmly. Remove paper and place loaf in a baking pan with a little drippings. Dredge with flour and brown quickly. Reduce heat and bake about 45 minutes, basting with drippings in pan. Slice and serve with either brown or tomato sauce.

• • •

Chocolate Mocha Cake.

Cream one-half cup of butter well, add gradually one cup of sugar, one and a half squares of bitter chocolate melted in one-half cup of very strong coffee, then add two level cups of pastry flour sifted with two rounded teaspoons of baking powder and one-half teaspoon of salt. Beat well and then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs. Butter and flour cake pans and in each spread three tablespoons of the batter. Bake from five to seven minutes in a quick oven. This amount makes six or seven layers.

Mocha Frosting.

Cream two cups of powdered sugar and one cup of sugar until very light. Beat two cups more of powdered sugar with the yolks of two eggs and one teaspoon of vanilla. Beat all together well and add one-half cup of very strong coffee in which has been melted one square of bitter chocolate. Cool before adding coffee and chocolate to above mixture. Spread between layers and cover top and sides.

Savory Roast Veal

Three tablespoons flour.
Three tablespoons fat.
One cup water.
One-fourth teaspoon paprika.

Heat fat in baking pan, add and brown celery and onions. Add veal and sprinkle with flour, half salt and paprika. Add parsley and water. Cover and bake 20 minutes in hot oven. Lower fire and bake one hour, baste every 20 minutes, add potatoes which have been sprinkled with rest of salt and paprika and bake one hour. Turn several times to allow even browning.

Corn Griddle Cakes

To vary the menu a bit on these frosty mornings. Two cups corn meal, one cup flour, one tablespoon butter, one beaten egg, one cup sour milk, one-half teaspoon soda, one teaspoon sugar. Scald the corn meal with a cup of boiling water, add the other ingredients and bake on a hot griddle as you do hot cakes.

Saar Return Commemorated On New Stamp

Germany Issues Set of Four Values Following Plebiscite Victory.

RETURN of the Saar to Germany hasn't been overlooked by the stamp makers of the Fatherland. They used a special set of four values to depict what happened in last month's plebiscite.

The theme of mother love was taken as the basis for the design, identical on the various denominations. The mother, as representing Germany, is shown clasping her child—the Saar—in close embrace. The faces of both are beaming with joy.

This is Germany's second Saar set within a comparatively short time. Several months previous to the plebiscite it issued two stamps, a 6 and a 12-pfennig in urging the return of the Saar to the mother country. The 6-pfennig showed on a dark background two hands holding a lump of earth labeled "Saar," while the 12 had a swastika sun casting its rays on the German eagle over which, in white letters, was "Saar."

A Danzig Pair.

The overprint, so familiar on the stamps of Europe, has been brought into play again to create a couple of additions to the list of the Free State of Danzig, that section of Northern Europe between Poland and Germany under the protection of the League of Nations.

Stamps of the type of 1924 bearing a coat of arms were used. The surcharge made the 7-pfennig yellow green into a 6. The new numeral was placed at the top center of the stamp, with the four "7's" of the original design obliterated with bars. The ink used was red.

Blue is the color of the overprint on the other stamp, changed into a 30-pfennig from a 35 ultramarine. Defacing of the numerals was done with a solid square.

British Jubilee Issue.

More information has been released by the British Government in connection with the Silver Jubilee stamps of England for King George V. It was announced by the Colonial Office that there has been prepared for the 43 colonies a series of stamps for each one. This does not include any of the dominions, for they will issue their own stamps.

The stamps are being printed in two colors by the intaglio process of engraving and will be made up in postoffice sheets of 60 each. The design will consist of a crown figure of King George on the right-hand side and on the left side a view of Windsor Castle. The series will consist of four denominations being those denominations which are most used in each colony. Counting the series which will be issued by England, there will be 172 stamps issued. The design for the stamps of all the colonies will be the same as the series issued for Great Britain, except that inscriptions will be changed.

The Colonial issues will be released May 6, 1935, the twenty-fifth anniversary of King George' accession. They will continue on sale until Dec. 31, 1935, when any surplus stocks will be withdrawn from circulation and destroyed. The corresponding denomination of stamps of the series in permanent use in each country will be discontinued during the sale of Jubilee stamps.

Hind's Sale News.

The latest sale of the Hind collection of stamps were those of the stamps of Southern European countries and their possessions. These stamps brought a total of $37,500. German and Italian collectors were unable to bid because of a ban by their Governments against transferring large sums of money to foreign countries.

Items of Interest.

The report that there would be an imperforate sheet issued for the stamp exhibition to be held in St. Petersburg, Fla., was incorrect, as a special sheet will not be issued.

• • •

• • •

The next meeting of the Mound City Stamp Club will be held Monday night, Feb. 11, at the Melbourne Hotel. This meeting will be a stamp bourse open to the public. Tables will be provided for all those who want them. The sale will be subject to the usual regulation. There will be no charge for the use of tables, but there will be a slight commission to the club on all sales made. There will be no charge on trading, which will be done at catalogue value.

• • •

On Sunday nights at 6 o'clock, over Station WIL, the president of the Mound City Stamp Club, J. Edward Vining, conducts a stamp collectors' program.

New Issues.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA—There was a special printing of the recent "National Anthem" stamps. It consisted of a special souvenir printing in sheets of 15 without gum. On the reverse of this sheet a text of the hymn was printed.

DANZIG—The 7pf yellow green of the current postage series has been overprinted 6pf in red and the 35pf sky blue has been overprinted in red 30pf.

GERMANY—A special series of stamps to celebrate the return of the Saar to Germany will be issued.

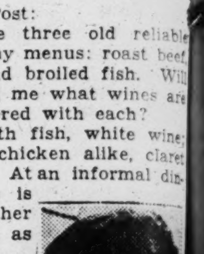
By Emily Post

Dear Mrs. Post:

THERE are three old reliable items on my menus: roast beef, chicken and broiled fish. Will you please tell me what wines are suitably proffered with each?

Answer: With fish, white wine; with beef or chicken alike, claret or burgundy. At an informal dinner one wine is enough — either white or red, as you prefer.



Emily Post

My dear Mrs. Post: I noticed that in one of your recent articles on the arrangement of a room you said never to place a sofa in front of the fireplace. I have tried to imagine every possible reason you may have had for this statement. In our house we have the sofa up against the wall opposite the fireplace, with a chair on either side of the fire, which seems to make a very livable as well as "come in" arrangement.

Answer: Oh, but your sofa does not push its knees up against the andirons and turn its back to the door and at the same time hide your fireplace, which were the reasons for my objections. The arrangement you describe is perfect.

Dear Mrs. Post: Please tell me the proper way to "dress" my tables, piano, radio and other smooth surfaces that are very much in danger of being scratched without any protection.

Answer: Do you mean to trim your furniture or simply to protect it where this is necessary? In smartest houses today, a piano has a piece of Chinese or Italian or other brocade covering at least part of it, but all other furniture surfaces are left bare—except for a very small strip or square of brocade on one table or another as a mat upon which to lay something down. Usually the best way to protect wood surfaces is to glue a piece of felt underneath the base of lamps, and all heavy ornaments that might scratch.

Dear Mrs. Post: Are you familiar with the very miniature squares of material known as cocktail napkins? Could these be used for afternoon tea or when serving a glass of wine and a few cookies?

Answer: The typical cocktail napkin is much too small for tea, but it is proper if you are really serving nothing but a glass of wine and cookies. After all, this is what cocktail napkins are intended for—quite as much as for cocktails.

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I HAVE had a bad case of blues today, because I am one of the many graduates who have just received their diplomas. I am 19 years old and always have hated school. But, now that I realize there is to be no more, it just makes me sick. I loved all my classmates and I hate to think there are not going to be any more loving smiles and "Hi kid." It just seems there isn't anything more to live for.

My mother and dad will soon get tired of my being at home all the time, with no job in view. My father has already started to "nag." Tell us, Mrs. Carr, what are we going to do?

To make matters worse I'm in love. I care very much for a boy still in school, though I know he doesn't realize it. I think he says nothing because he isn't making money to take me places.

JOCELYN.

Almost everyone has a dull ache at the time of graduation; there are some times pleasant ties, too, that are broken, finally, at this time. But usually, those who have this kind of feeling, have made much of their school life and of their friends while at school. A girl who has "hated school" is rather absurd, isn't she, to bewail the loss, when the time comes? I am afraid yours is a case of wanting something you cannot have all the time and moping and thus losing all the opportunities of the present.

I am afraid, too, that you have been hearing some sophomore essays about the sad condition of the boys and girls; how there is no use trying to get work and the tragedy of the present time is, "Our Young People." There is more truth in some of this than we like. But there is truth too, that a good many boys and girls are using this as an excuse for rebellion and laziness. They make this sage announcement, "There is no employment; why try?"

How much effort have you made to get a job? There are still jobs and you might be the one to have exceptional chances. No wonder your mother and father are discouraged and dissatisfied—if you look and act in a manner shown by your letter. Nobody wants a grouch around the house. Try to look a little nearer; go to the libraries and get a list of organizations. Ask at the Community Council for their leaflet, "Adventures in Spare Time." Try to take an interest in your housework and get out and hustle.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I WOULD like to know if you could give me any advice on how to stop perspiration on eyebrows and hands. I am 5 feet 4½ inches tall and weight 124. Is this about right?

CLEOPATRA.

Use a tablespoonful of powdered alum in a bowl of your rinse water when washing your hands. You might apply a little to brows; but you will have to be careful to keep it from your eyelashes and, of course, from your eyes. An astringent toilet water could be used instead of the alum and water, both for hands and brow.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

PLEASE tell me where one would write to find out a boy in the navy? When does Lent end? Is it considered bad form to dance in Lent.

MICKEY.

If the boy enlisted here, the United States Navy Recruiting Station, Third and Olive, may have a record of him. Otherwise, you will have to write the Navy Department, Washington, D. C.

Lent begins this year with Ash Wednesday, March 6 and ends with Easter Sunday, April 21.

If you belong to a church or are of a faith which observes the season of Lent, keeping it reverently in memory of Christ's fasting, crucifixion, death and resurrection, it is inconsistent, if not irreverent to indulge in gayety, social pleasures and frivolity. The season is supposed to be one of self-sacrifice and meditation, not of worldly pleasures.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

IS it possible for a child of eight years old to obtain work (without pay) as a child model for clothes, shoes, hats, etc., with department stores? Could you give me some information as to how I could go about this? My child is well-developed, attractive and with beautiful eyes and hair and I thought this might be an opportunity for her.

DAILY READER.

Apply to manager, or director of personnel, or the heads of children's departments in the stores.

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

Bright Shades Are Used for Decorations

Boutonnieres and Other Accessories Shown In Gay Combinations.

By Sylvia

ALL of the fascinating new shades and color combinations that mean so much in the spring mode are appearing in the form of boutonnieres and other trifles to decorate a costume. Turquoise and pink are two favorites often seen together. Shreds of patent leather have been formed into buds, two pink and a third blue while the leaves that finish the cluster are of matching hues. Citron yellow is another shade matched with navy blue.

A cherry boutonniere will prove a patriotic gesture if you happen to wear it on the twenty-second day of this month. On any other day it will be equally as chic since cherries are important in the mode. However, you'll discover that raspberries are even smarter, especially if you choose a cluster of different shades. A red one, a black one and a green one look very well together surrounded by soft green leaves.

If you see a woman walking blithely down the street with something thrown over her arm that looks like a mammoth driving glove, don't draw the conclusion that she has chauffeuring ambitions. That cuff-like quantity of navy glove calfskin is really the top of her handbag. The bag resembles a large mitten, minus the thumb section. The owner of this bag is following a continental vogue of throwing half of her bag over her arm. In more conservative moments she may fold the top down and carry the bag by its handle.

The possessor of an elegant leather belt thinks it deserves good companionship, so she adds a matching leather bow at the neckline of her dress. These clever sets are decorated with metal nail heads and appear in a variety of colors. The neckline bow is a small reproduction of the one that adorns the front of the belt and fastens to the frock with a metal clip.

You'll be wanting some tailored blouses for your new suit, so here are a few pointers. The shirtwaist theme is being developed nobly by the makers of silk blouses. These have a primness about them which is regarded as very chic. A washable silk, for example, appears in pastel tints and is elaborated with drawnwork vest effects. The polka dotted blouse is very smart, especially if there are white dots on a dark background. If you insist upon being very severe but want bright colors, those little shirtwaists from the girl's department are of grown-ups interest.

Which will you have, a long scarf of crisp material or a triangle that drapes in folds around the neck? Both are conspicuous in the new collections. Suitable, especially for those tailored suits that have everyone enthusiastic, is a striped taffeta scarf. This tones from white to black with several variations of gray placed between the two extremes. Fringed ends are effective. Another scarf that endorses the long and narrow theme combines red, white and navy. The fabric is taffeta but some of the stripes are crinkled.

Triangles of flower printed crepe may be the gayest you can find but they won't do for certain sports costumes. The triangle of cobwebby knitted wool is the one you'll want for wool frocks and suits. An arresting style combines beige with tomato shade, the latter tone being emphasized. A boucle scarf that employs a very lacy stitch will aid the appearance of a boucle frock.

Rows of narrow taffeta ruffles trim the cuffs of fabric gloves. The tendency is to decorate only a part of the cuff in this frivolous manner. Another trimming detail concerns the use of fringe. The same novelty material of which the glove is made is cut into fringed strips and festooned on the cuffs. Dark shades, including brown and navy, predominate among these novelties.

Rice and Shrimp

Two tablespoons flour.
One cup milk.
One-fourth cup cream.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One-fourth teaspoon paprika.
Two-thirds cup boiled rice.
One tablespoon chopped green pepper.
One tablespoon chopped onion.

Melt butter, add flour and when blended add milk and cream and cook until creamy sauce forms. Stir constantly. Add seasonings, rice and shrimp. Mix well and pour into sallow pan. Sprinkle with cheese, bake 20 minutes in moderate oven.

Made in Advance

If you wish to make the pie or pudding with a meringue atop a bit in advance of the party and are afraid the meringue will fall, add while whipping a pinch of cream of tartar. This is usually very effective.

"I WANTED OUT" -- -- --

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"I didn't know what else to do, so I started to write."

SYNOPSIS:

In the foregoing chapters of her vivid narrative, Elsie Robinson tells of childhood days in Benicia, California, where life was hard and rugged. When a girl reached 17, she was married. Elsie wanted more than that. She wanted to know and feel everything life had to offer; she wanted out! So at nineteen she went to Vermont to marry a young New Englander, little realizing then the heartache and bitterness this would bring her. Lack of understanding kept Elsie and her husband spiritually apart. They never really became one. Life was a drudge. Elsie felt stifled, chained to her mixing bowl when the corner baker made your bread-making seem a waste of effort. She might still be only "Missus" to her husband but in the outside world women were becoming people.

CHAPTER THREE.

FOR what could we do next, we first brides of the Twentieth Century? Keep house as our mothers had done, and be content with that? It wasn't possible. Life had already spoiled us for that. Life had put ideas into our heads, questions on our tongues, a most unladylike wallop in our fists. We were quite willing to be housekeepers, wives and mothers—but then what?

Society? One only read about it in the Sunday supplements. Careers? We didn't even know what they were. We had no place in the industries or professions. Politics? Few of us realized what it was all about. Somewhere certain women were making a great fuss about suffrage. But most of us didn't care a hoot whether we ever voted or not. Yet we had to have something—something with meaning in it; something that would give our lives the sense of importance which our mothers' and grandmothers' lives had had, but which ours lacked.

For there was the crux of it all—a fact which is so often overlooked by male sociologists. We pioneer wives of the "emancipated" Twentieth Century weren't merely restless creatures trying to escape "woman's sphere." The truth was, woman's sphere had been knocked into a cocked hat—and not by women!

Men had discovered machines, and the profit in machines. Forthwith, they had but one desire: to turn all possible handwork into machine work. Since time immemorial women had spent their lives doing handwork. Their personal pride and zest arose from it; their place in society was assured by it; the home was based upon it. Women weren't just housewives in 1803. They were creators, artists, captains of industry—with society depending on their output. But in 1903, with machines beginning to do practically all the housework, just how did a wife rate? What, then, did a woman's work mean to herself or to her world?

My mother, coming as a pioneer to a frontier town that had no stores, made her own soap; felt that soap-making, under such conditions, was no mean achievement. But now in Brattleboro, though there were stores and tons of available soap, I still made mine, because New England wives—and most American wives—were still doing things like that.

Arduously, rebelliously, task by task, I learned to live life as it had been lived a hundred years before. To "buy ready-make was slack." And so I made soap, tried out lard, concocted cough medicine, baked endless mountains of bread, rolls and pastries, crammed hundreds of jars with preserves, conserves, jams, jellies, marmalades, pickles and fruit juices.

I had never sewed. And "machine stitching" was still anathema in a well-kept Vermont home. Even the lowliest dishrag was hemmed by hand. All my husband's shirts I made; every garment of my own, even my suits and coats.

And at first it was all fun, being new. But presently every stab of the needle, every whirl of the mixing spoon, shrieked the question: "What's the use? Why spend one's youth like this, doing things that can be done so much better by machine?"

And since I couldn't answer the question, I did the next best thing. Hurled the hemming out of the window; kicked the mixing bowl across the floor.

* * *

MARRIAGE in Brattleboro, Vermont, in 1903—that was how it went. And in varying degrees, that was how marriage was going everywhere. For something had gone out of marriage. Something had been taken away from women—their place in the sun.

For the Good Old Days were never so good or so clean or kind or fair as they were cracked up to be. I am 50, living in a chaotic world that is infinitely more complicated and dangerous than the one in which I was born. But I'd rather have one modern day, with its risks and challenges than a lifetime of that sentimental stagnation to which women were doomed in 1903. And when I hear my gray-haired contemporaries bleating about the Dear Dead Past and telling the youngsters what a paradise it was, I have but one answer: "Aw, phooey!"

Moreover, the brides of 1903 suspected that that was the answer, even then. Often I read scholarly treatises on the Dawn of the Modern Era—and grin to myself. To hear the wise boys tell it, you'd think the Great Change was ushered in by the spilled blood of patriots and the conferences of statesmen. As a matter of fact, it arrived with the uproar of smashed teacups, banged doors, and young ladies of 19 shrieking to go home to their mothers.

So married life started for us in No. 13 against a crumbling background of outgrown sentimentality and economic programs gone haywire. But even at that, we might have made a go of it if we two could have stood united against that background. But we didn't. And the reason was apparent from the first. C. B. C. and I were never "we two." There was always at least one outsider present—usually two.

One of those outsiders was my mother-in-law. Like the proverbial Chinese dowager, she dominated every activity of our home. But occasionally she was absent. There was one other, however, who was never absent, from whom we were never free. That other was—God.

That lugubrious Lord of old New England — you cannot possibly understand the whys or wherefores of your country, unless you are familiar with that remarkable deity.

Family automobile and neighborhood talkies had not yet arrived to challenge or temper the rigors of the Sabbath. All nice Young People went to at least three church services on Sunday. Outside of that the only permissible diversions were reading-a-good-book or taking-a-quiet-walk. Even a furtive game of croquet was a public scandal.

Nor did these prohibitions cease with the Sabbath. Dancing, everywhere, was considered chancy, if not openly tabooed. Theaters? Border line. Movies, when they first came flickering in, might not be actually wicked but they were certainly doubtful.

And now are you beginning to see why it was not possible for a Western girl to achieve marriage with a Vermont Puritan? Tough on me? Tough on him, too, for he was, at heart, a decent, kindly man, cruelly needing the fun and freedom which he dared not take.

I can see him yet—the fine dark blue eyes hardening themselves against their own hunger; the sensitive, intelligent features tightening against the challenge of the world, the flesh and the devil as represented by Yours Truly. Yes, I had suspected he was like this before marriage. I had known he was afraid of his mother, and was always talking texts. But these little eccentricities would surely cease when we—and love—could go off by ourselves.

But with the first limp, reluctant handshake which my new husband gave me after the minister had pronounced us one, I began to realize my tragic mistake. Marrying a Puritan wasn't—could never be—merely a private romance. It was part of a Pilgrim's Progress. You might take a wife or a husband, but your Soul's Salvation was still your main concern. So God wasn't just an accessory such as all respectable family folk expected to have around the home—He was the whole show.

Was I in love? Again I can only say I don't know. No 19-year-old girl, past or present, really knows whether she is in love or not. But every healthy 19-year-old girl is willing to be in love. I wanted to be in love.

The wickedness and waste of it! I wanted loving. Life and I wanted loving. Not the mere gestures of sex, but all that loving implies. Gay dreams, gypsy hours together, brave adventurings, the dear delight of making a home, the pride and wonder and fun of creating a family. Home and family life—these things are not properly built on fear of God. They are built on love of Life. And the man or woman who does not love Life cannot possibly make a good father or mother. Nor can the house which is not filled with the joy of life make a good home.

So Life and I wanted loving. But neither of us got it. And as a consequence, we blew out a cylinder head.

For you cannot cheat life and get by with it. You cannot dam up the healthy impulses of flesh and spirit and escape the inevitable penalty. Particularly when your program offers no substitute for the urge denied, nor any escape from the spectacle of your own frustration.

There were no escapes. The Puritan blight lay, also, over all the other exits. Even that handicraft which had once been a safety valve for women had lost its healing power with the coming of machines.

Then if work was out, now about play? Horrors! Even the dumbest child knew that play was the devil's chance. Besides, play wasted time. Time was sacred, and you mustn't waste it.

* * *

LAUGHTER, with the exception of a Dry Smile, was under suspicion. For laughter meant Being Glad. And what right had you to be glad when you should have been wrestling, in terror and remorse, for the salvation of your immortal soul?

Even color, fragrance, the pleasant fripperies of life—these, too, were sins. From the time I was 20 until I was 30, I wore only gray chambray for week days, black taffeta or wool for Sundays. Gray and white were permissible. Dark blue was conceded. And in the sanctity of the Lawful Bedroom, one might even indulge in an orgy of lavender flannel, provided it buttoned snugly to the neck. But beyond that, one invited the powers of darkness.

I never had a marcel, a manicure, a box of face powder, a bottle of perfume, a finger ring, silk stockings or a sleeveless nightgown until I was nearly 35. Yet, notwithstanding-however-nevertheless-and-in-spite-of-these-facts, girls, I somehow managed to get along.

Once, when I had reached the doddering-dowager age of 22, my disgusted mother sent me a suit of rose flannel. I loved that suit! I whooped over it, cried over it, put it on and turned cartwheels in it—told them all to go to the devil, I'd wear it anyway. But the suit disappeared. I still suspect foul play.

A dreadful existence. All the more dreadful because, in the outer world, life was sweeping onward in a fierce tide, crashing over the old walls. Vaguely I heard the clamor, glimpsed the glitter, felt the call—but was powerless to act.

That seems incredible to you modern brides, doesn't it? You'd have "told him to go to hell, walked out, got a job, come home"—yes? Then why didn't I? Because, my dear, 3000 miles is a long walk home. And what was I to do after I got there?

Everything was "a long walk" for women in 1903—with no particular destination. Easy enough for 1934 Flossie to flounce out of her husband's house and go get her old job back. But just try and do it in 1903! Men held the purses. Men held the jobs. Women had few rights, and wives could be legally beaten; could be thrown out penniless if they refused any of a "husband's rights." It was a Man's World and nothing else but. And if a rebellious young wife didn't like her married status, she could lump it.

* * *

WHY were there so few divorces? Why did Joan stick by Darby to the grave? That was why. It was not, as the sentimentalists would have us believe, because wedlock was holier and women more loving and loyal than they are today. It was because marriage was a one-way alley with no exits for women.

So there I was and there I stayed. One year, two, four, five, ten. Years that were always the same. I went nowhere. I met no one. Like silent rain, the days and weeks and months ran together in one gray blur. Yet two great things happened to me during that time.

I am always intrigued when I hear writers telling how they got that way. According to most of them, Art kept nagging at them until they just had to do something about it. Well, if it takes that to make a writer, then I was disqualified at the start. For I knew nothing about Art and cared less. I started writing for exactly the same reason that a starving man starts eating—to save my life.

The silence was driving me mad. I had come from a land of continuous fiesta. Now there were weeks, months, when I hardly heard the sound of a human voice. True, I lived in a closely settled village street. There were people all around me. But they were New England people. They rarely talked, even to one another. They seldom visited. In those first two desperate years, not a dozen of them knocked at my door. As for my husband, he lapsed into silences lasting weeks at a time.

True Influenza Epidemics Are Decidedly Rare

Doctors Seldom Go Through More Than Two, Impeding Medical Knowledge.

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

TRUE influenza visits the earth so infrequently that few doctors live long enough to go through two epidemics. An M. D. is, by the nature of things, adult when he experiences his first epidemic, say 30, and if our calculations are correct and about 50 years elapse between epidemics, he will be 80 when the second one comes along, if he is here at all, and in the meantime will have lost all interest in the subject. Perhaps that is why our knowledge of it does not advance any more rapidly.

As I said yesterday, I am very skeptical about the authenticity of the epidemics which have been named influenza since 1920, when we had the tail end of the last one. Influenza is a real, sure enough disease. And unless four out of 10 people die in an epidemic called influenza, I am willing to go on record that it is not the real thing. I know that customer. I once had 2400 patients with it under my general supervision. We had a city of influenza—a hospital, a camp, a Y. M. C. A. quarters, Salvation Army canteen, infantry, cavalry and artillery barracks filled with it.

You need no description of influenza out of the old family doctor book. In most of the Victorian writers you will find a graphic literary masterpiece. Thackeray had an article in Punch, in December, 1847 (one of the great influenza years). He describes the plight of the contributors, all of whom were laid low just when the week's issue had to go to press.

"Smith at work, drawing the very cleverest caricature, though torn by cough, sore throat, headache, and pains in the limbs, and though the printer's boy (who never leaves him) was asleep by the bedside in a chair. Tortured by pain and worn down by water gruel, covered by his dressing gown, all his clothes and all the blankets the landlady could supply him, with six phials of medicine and an ink bottle by his side."

"Brown was found in a warm bath, composing those fine sentiments which the reader will notice in his noble and heart stirring article. 'I am trying to get my steam up,' he exclaimed with a sickly smile." (Do not be alarmed. That is only one of Punch's jokes. —L. C.).

They are all there— the symptoms of the disease—the pains in the back and legs, the headaches, cough, sore throat, chilly feeling. And the treatment—the rest in bed, plenty of covering, the hot steam bath, even the six different kinds of medicine—just the same in 1847 as they were in 1918 (and as probably they will be in 1948).

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

WE SWOON WITH DELIGHT!

STATE COLLEGE, Miss. — Exquisite perfume abounds in everyday gasoline that powers the family car, according to a discovery of Drs. Clyde Sheely and W. H. Kink, chemistry professors here. Perfume manufacturers are showing great interest in the discovery.

What a grand surprise!
Spread the tidings far and near—
Sing . . . rejoice . . . let's give a cheer!
Such news. Such luck. Who'd ever thought
This year of promise would have brought.
Us such a boon......so soon.
We swoon
With ectasy.
We knew, of course, that gasoline
Contained a lot of kerosene...
We also knew—and how it hurt!....
That in our gasoline was dirt,
And many things....for instance, rust
And grime and grease and dust....but Oh!
We didn't, couldn't really know
Refiners were, in truth, to loom
So great of heart. Just think!
Perfume!

Flowers may bud and wither and pass—
What care we? We'll sniffle the gas,
And life will be sweet and joyous, really,
Thanks to Professors King and Sheely!

Dean of Harvard Business School says: "Business needs men who understand government as much as government needs men who are sensitive to the sound needs of business."

As it is, all the business men know what the government oughta do, and all the politicians know what business oughta do.

We might compromise—turn business over to the politicians and let the business men take over the government.

DAYS OF REAL SPORT

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat—10 Years Ago Item.)

Mack Jones, who was in from Liberal, Friday, says they've had an epidemic of old fashioned head lice in the Liberal schools. First thing anybody knew, nearly all the pupils in school, including the most particular and persnickety of the big girls had 'em. They had to take two days off, and dope the kids 'heads to get rid of them. Mack wanted 'em to get a big tank of sheep dip, but they wouldn't do it.

Am sending page ad Mirror ran Tuesday, dedicated to President's Birthday Parties, and your slogan is featured: "If you buy tickets and you dance, then some child who can't even walk, may be able to dance some day"....A wire saying: "It must make you happy to know your slogan is being officially used everywhere"....But here's the burnup....A wire just came from you-know-whom over at Postal Telegraph reading: "We all tried our hardest to credit slogan to you, but Carl Byoir of Nat'l Committee for President's Dances evidently likes to claim for himself, sorry"..

Lines.

The line about Bertrand Taylor's lovely daughter, Mary, wanting a stage job, but no luck—resulted in a fortnight's radio job via an agency....On Romberg's program ....Rumor around that Mary Sherwood (Robert E.'s ex) and Alexander Stronach Jr. of Washington society, were welded at Harrison Wednesday....Did you see the Trib's editorial called: "Slang Is Poetry?"....One line that would interest you, I'm sure, considering all the criticism aimed at slanguage, is: "The making and speaking or writing of really good slang is an art"....You might get a paragraph out of it for one day next week, will send....Several squawks the other day because of the way one broadcasting firm handled survivors of the Mohawk catastrophe ... One man was heard to say: "Oh, come on, lady we don't care how you look; come on!"

Ringer.

Robert Nathan, the author, is a ringer for Wilentz, don't you think? . . . I hear the lowdown on why Dietrich walked out on Garbo that night on the Coast is that Garbo came in with Princess Paley. . . And Dietrich and La Paley had a previous row over an hilarious matter—will tell you in person. . . . So when La Paley came in with Greta, Dietrich tank she go home, and she did! . . . Elsie Robinson is back and with kind words. . . . Bronson Howard's niece phoned. Said her uncle was 70 when he died and he didn't kill himself, as the legends put it. . . . She is an admirer of yours, she said, and wanted the record cleared, please.

Haw!

Dick Himber just phoned. He notes that pigs are being used for scientific experiment at colleges, and he suggests that the song be modernized, to wit: "This little piggy went to Marquette" . . . Far be it from us to make Ed Wynne's face red as his fireman's hat, but you know he's getting plenty of G's from Texaco, the oil firm. Well, he just bought two Diesel (crude oil) engines for his yot from the Winton Engine Co.!

Crime Note.

It seems that after your line that Lauritz Melchior, the Met-opera man, had his luggage thefted, the Danish papers picked it up and translated it that Mr. Melchior himself had been stolen. . . . The Danish gazettes in New York and in Denmark carried big pieces that their favorite citizen had been abducted and his family from the old country have been cabling him frantically ever since. .

ALL THAT GLITTERS

A New Serial

By ANNE GARDNER

Jerry Has a Gay and Rather Irresponsible Time, but Is Suddenly Awakened to a Serious Viewpoint.

CHAPTER NINE.

"FLATTERER!! Bette laughed a soft happy laugh. Later she would have to tell him about Stirling Vachel, but not now.

Bette hardly knew why she asked the next question, it was so banal. "Did Jerry seem happy?"

"I reckon so. She was going some place at a hundred miles a minute. That seems to be what it takes to make 'em happy, around here."

"What do you think of Gordon?" Bette's fears and questionings had vanished. Jim was here, the same Jim, who wouldn't change, whom she knew as well as she knew his funny, trotting way of dancing, just how many steps forward, how many to the right, the same number to the left, then forward again.

> BEGIN HERE TODAY:
> JERRY RICHARDS has just been married to GORDON BROCK, and the event is the outstanding affair of the Huntington social season of 1928. Although the groom is handsome and very much in love with her, Jerry has discovered at the last minute that she does not love him as she should, but goes through with the marriage. Her older sister, BETTE, has come with JIM, her husband, from their Western ranch, but Bette is not enjoying herself with her oldfriends. They have changed with prosperity. She and they have nothing in common. Jim is a great success with her friends, and she is relieved to have him turn to her for a favorite waltz.
> NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

"Oh, he means all right. Nice fellow. I had quite a talk with him. He offered me a job in his investment house, if we'd move back here. I didn't return the compliment, though, and offer him a job on the ranch. He looks to me like one of these dressed up dudes that make a fine figure on a horse when the going's good, but let 'em get thrown once and they haven't got the guts to climb back up and try it again."

"Jerry said they were going to give our children advantages."

"Yep, he said something of that sort to me. I intimated we'd taken care of the kids so far without assistance, and aimed to go right on doing it."

"I hope you weren't rude! They mean well."

"Don't worry, honey. I said thank you kindly, as I knew you'd want me to. Bette, shall I take that job?"

"No, Jim, no!" Bete wailed. I want to go home. I want to go home just as soon as I can get there!"

The airplane had let its occupants out at Chicago hours ago, the Century was hurling across Indiana, the lights dimmed, the passengers sleeping. A smiling porter was polishing the custom made shoes of the gentleman in Stateroom A. That was the bride and groom. You could always tell a bride and groom. There'd be a big tip for him at New York from the gentleman in Stateroom A. Yes, suh!

Jerry and Gordon arrived in Paris after a boat trip which had been like one long party. So many delightful people going to Europe! All the trans-Atlantic boats were crowded. By the time the bridal party landed, they needed a rest from merrymaking.

Jerry recovered very quickly, however, and set about the business of shopping. She shopped in the morning and in the afternoon, Gordon always going with her. He was not much help, however, thinking as he did that Jerry looked charming in everything.

She worked hard at the shopping, because there was so much money to be spent. At first she had said, "but I am spending so much! You must tell me when to stop, Gordon. Francs don't seem like money to me."

A few times Jerry tried to check her bills, sitting at the buhl desk in the sitting room of their suite at the Ritz chewing a gold pencil.

"The more times I add, the more different results I get," she said helplessly to Gordon. "You'll have to audit me. I'm bad enough on dollars and cents, but when it comes to francs, I'm hopeless."

Gordon lowered the Paris edition he was reading, to smile at her, as one smiles at a cunning and adored child. She was so lovely.

• • •

HER long, floating negligee was of chiffon, the chief function of which seemed to be to enhance the glamor of exquisite lingerie. Her hair, her skin had received the ministrations of the foremost artists of the world, but her own good taste had kept them within bounds, so that she still looked like a nice American girl.

"Why bother to check them, sweetheart?"

"A throwback to some remote ancestor, I suppose. Besides, you can't trust these shops. They take all kinds of advantage of Americans."

"Well, what do we care? What if they do mark things up a few francs? Francs aren't money the way the exchange is now." He dropped his paper and came over to stand beside her, leaned down to kiss her shoulder and run his lips gently over the white perfumed neck. "I guess we can afford it."

Jerry sighed. "I can't get used to the idea of being so rich. I've always had everything I wanted, but this—well this is stupendous!"

Money seemed to converge upon them from all directions in golden streams. There were the profits the office at home was making, the profits from the stocks Gordon owned privately, which mounted like a magic beanstalk, a miraculous growth that had no limit.

Gordon, buying every edition of every American paper, always turned at once to the stock market reports, and showed Jerry how this stock or that had gone higher since the last time he had looked.

"That means five thousand dollars for us. Not bad?" One day it was twenty-five thousand. It came in faster than they could ever spend it, though Jerry conscientiously did her best.

When they were not shopping—and besides the things for herself, Jerry bought trunkloads of presents for everyone she knew—they were playing. Lunching or dining in the famous cafes, they were almost sure to see someone they knew. Paris was full of Americans, spending stock market profits, made even greater because in early 1929, the exchange was so overwhelmingly in favor of the dollar.

Soon Jerry and Gordon had a crowd, with whom they did things, all the things that it was expensive and fun to do. They visited all the places Jerry had ever heard of, and a great many new ones. It was a busy, idle life, in which every whim was granted, every dream was made to come true. A never-ending party.

In a bar at 4 o'clock in the morning, someone would suggest the Riviera. Cars would be rounded up and by dawn they would be off, racing across France, perhaps to Cap Antibes. There they would swim and lie about in the sun until they tired of that, then dash off to another place. It was more fun this way, with the crowd, for Gordon, darling though he was, had little to say except the love phrases that he had already said so many times.

It was fun, but as the crowd traveled and played together, it got pretty riotous. Jerry was thankful that Gordon did not drink. So many of their gay companions became sotted as the night advanced, and she would not have wanted Gordon to be that way. Jerry herself needed no stimulant to maintain her high spirits. They bubbled ceaselessly, the envy of the other women in the crowd.

• • •

IT became accepted that Jerry was the interesting member of the Brock family. Gordon's money making ability was taken for granted here, where everyone was making money hand over fist as the beanstalk at home shot his top higher into the sky. As he did not flirt with the women and had little to say to the men, gradually the crowd paid little attention to him, looking to Jerry whenever there was a decision to be made.

There was one type of playing in which Jerry did not indulge.

"I don't play it that way," was her inevitable response when someone tried to make love to her. Rebuffs of this sort were always accepted without rancor by the men to whom they were made. There were too many pretty women floating around to get excited when one refused to play. Jerry was merely considered eccentric. She never told Gordon of these encounters.

In this European interlude, only one man ever disturbed her poise. He was the handsomest man Jerry had ever seen, with a cap of golden curls surmounting chiseled features. Perhaps his successes with women entitled him to be cynical. Yet it was not his attractions which upset Jerry.

They were at Monte Carlo that night, winning or losing with equal pleasure. The Great Gamble in which they were all engaged would take care of the little losses of the gaming tables. Jerry had wandered out on the terrace to look at the night, and the man had followed her.

She felt his arms go about her, and she freed herself adroitly. "I don't play that way," she made her customary speech.

"I know that's what they've all said," he returned unruffled. "Why don't you?"

"It's just not my idea of fun," she replied.

"You know you don't love your husband," Ransom said casually. "You couldn't. He's not strong enough for you."

"That's very funny," Jerry said. "He's the big man of our city at home, although he's young. He's the original strong, silent man."

"When everybody runs off at the mouth, silence passes for strength," Ransom said wisely. "You'll see. And then it'll me just a matter of time until you'll be playing the way all the others do. Look around you and you'll see that, too."

It was dawn, as usual, when they went to their rooms at the hotel. Ordinarily Jerry was like a sleepy kitten in the interval between the breaking up of the party and getting to bed, but tonight she was wide awake, tense.

She put her hand on Gordon's. "Oughtn't we to be getting home, dear?" she asked. "I expect you've been concealing a yearning to get back to business."

"Whenever you're ready, sweetheart," he answered, compliant, as always with her wishes. "We can stay as long as you're enjoying it."

"I think I want to go home," Jerry said. "I think we've played long enough, don't you?"

It was marvelous, being spoiled and indulged this way, yet Jerry caught herself wishing that he had taken the lead, made the decision this once.

Life's Meaning Depends Upon The Viewpoint

By The Rev. J. F. Newton

"WHAT is the meaning of human life altogether?" asks Einstein in his new book. "To answer this question at all implies a religion.

"Is there any sense, then, in putting it?" he continues. "I answer, the man who regards his own life and that of his fellow creatures as meaningless is not merely unfortunate but disqualified for life.

"A hundred times every day I remind myself that my inner and outer life depends on the labors of other men, living and dead, and that I must exert myself in order to give in the measure as I have received and am still receiving."

Yes, such a question implies a religion of some sort, because religion has to do with the whole of life. It is in fact a sense of union with the whole of life which gives unity and meaning to all its parts.

All by ourselves we cannot find any meaning in life. We are born into a community, and only in fellowship can we know what life is all about, learning together what none can know alone.

If we are dogged by a sense of the futility and meaninglessness of life, it is because we are living for ourselves. Selfishness ends in uselessness. Having received so much, we must give.

A great psychologist sums up the meaning of life in two words, Contribution and Co-operation. In other words, we get out of life as much as we put into it, measure for measure; and no more.

The neurotic lives negatively; his idea of life is that others must serve and contribute to him. He does not live, because he will not co-operate. No wonder he is a skeptic, a pessimist, a cynic. He does not feel himself a part of the whole under obligation to all.

No one finds life worth while, just to suit his taste. Our business is to make it worth while. That is our job, and in doing it we find the meaning of life so far as we can ever know it.

What the meaning of life as a whole is only God can know; and we know it only as we know Him, and live to do His wise will.

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

» by WYNN «

For Thursday, Feb. 7.

TRIM ship, get things in order. Suppose you had a million dollar opening—you wouldn't want to miss it just because all the socks weren't darned or the ashes ll sifted. Be ready for the best and it will be easier to expect.

Hatred.

Somehow we do not associate all the causes with the effects we sometimes get. For instance, according to Manly Hall, man's international hatreds and wars are directly responsible for the added intensity of our ailments, both as to quantity and quality. This is related to nature's moral laws, among which is the fact that we cannot hate and remain healthy. War is immoral.

Your Year Ahead.

Your year ahead advocates work done diligently and quietly behind the scenes in some way to promote occupational status. If practical, branch out, cover more territory. Danger: Aug. 20 to Oct. 6; Dec. 17 to Feb. 1, 1936.

Tomorrow.

Christopher Crow Suffers Greatly From Frost-Bite

By Mary Graham Bonner

IN a flash they all saw what had happened and Christopher now knew, too. Willy Nilly had been first to notice.

"It was all my fault," sighed Willy Nilly. "If you hadn't been ashamed of yourself, because I made you ashamed of yourself, you might have stayed all night in the house. Or at least when it was so cold, you would have tapped on my window and I would have let you in,

"I didn't know the temperature would drop like that. But I should have known. I had so much covering over me I didn't realize until this morning how bitterly cold it was.

"Oh, oh, I'll never forgive myself."

"Maybe," said Rip, "Christopher has just been nipped a bit."

"I know that a crow doesn't always put his head all the way under his wing," continued Willy Nilly. "I know that sometimes his right eye likes to keep a bit more of a ready watch on the world. And it was so cold, so bitterly cold last night."

"I don't believe I've frozen my eye," said Christopher bravely, though now that he was in where it was warm, the pain was very great.

"Don't worry about me, Willy Nilly. It was not your fault. And too," he said, and his beak twitched into a brave little smile, "maybe I'd be better off only seeing out of one eye. Perhaps I see too much with both."

"Oh, don't say that. I cannot bear it," said Willy Nilly. "You can be as mischievous as you like—I only want you to be strong and lose nothing that rightfully belongs to you."

No. 1 Hang-Over—Over Eating

Most people think of over drinking as the cause of hang-overs when over eating, or eating the wrong food is the big offender. Distress after eating is banished after a glass of 7-Up. The effect of 7-Up in the stomach neutralizes the acid—the CO^2 (Carbon Dioxide) purifies and sweetens the stomach. 7-Up does take the "ouch" out of grouch. You can easily prove it. Keep a case at home.

TOMORROW: "A POOR HOUSE MOTORIST."

Love's Hireling

By E. K. Lockwood

"VENICE is exactly as I pictured it!" The pudgy blonde in the black satin gown drew a long, shivering breath. "The moonlight just seems to pour down on one, doesn't it?"

"I suppose so." The tall, angular woman with her shifted her weight from one foot to the other and glared down at the oily water. "Fine place for rheumatism, if you ask me. I never saw such a clutter of moldy old buildings. Where's Henry?"

"I sent him into the hotel for my lace shawl. I must look beautiful tonight, Emily."

"Still rolling your eyes at that gondolier, Patsy?"

"That's a crude way to put it," Patsy bristled. "I've already told you I think Luigi is in love with me."

Emily snorted, "That's a fine way for a married woman to talk. Suppose I should tell Henry?"

"You wouldn't, would you?" Patsy gasped. "When you've always been my best friend?"

"No, I won't tell him, but I don't want to listen to any more drivel about your off-color gondolier. Let's sit down. I don't like cold stone benches, either, but my feet hurt."

"I'll never mention Luigi—after tonight." Patsy lowered her voice to a hollow whisper. "Because tonight is the last time I shall ever see him. And I'm going to see him somehow—alone."

The gondola eased up to the steps, its gay-colored lanterns swaying. Luigi, a blur of bright red silk, mahogany-colored skin and flashing white teeth, guided the party to seats in the bobbing vehicle. Henry Brown was yawning.

A long, languorous hour later Luigi again guided his gondola to the steps and helped the Brown party out onto what passes for terra firma in Venice.

"You said you wanted to chin with Luigi," he called back sleepily. "Well, go to it. I'm going to hit the hay."

Henry and Emily disappeared.

"Aaah!" Luigi leaped eagerly up the stone steps. "Madame, you are sure you wish to talk to me—alone?"

"Of course. Let's sit here—by the wall." Patsy turned and walked to a near-by bench, trailing her blue lace shawl in what she hoped was a romantic and effective manner.

* * *

"TELL me it is not the tapestry!" He caught her hands and pressed them to his lips. "Is it not because you know what I feel for you that you would talk to me?"

"Ye-es." Patsy swallowed hard.

"Patsy, my beautiful one!" He wrapped his long arms around her hungrily. "Every day from the first I have adored you! You are mine—mine. Ah, beloved, you will remain here—and marry me?"

"Oh—no! Luigi!" Patsy struggled feebly in his strong grasp. "I have a nice home in Albany—and three children——"

"Why should that matter?" He tightened his hold. His lips bore down upon her.

"Luigi!" She wilted under the force of his embrace. "Please—don't be so rough—I must go in—really——"

"Not yet!" He kissed her again, a long, strangling kiss that took the breath out of her. "You cannot say that you have not looked at me with eyes of longing—and I am hungry for you!—I cannot let you go—ever"——

"Luigi!" She freed herself when he paused for breath. "I do feel—a lot of things—toward you—but my husband is insanely jealous—he might cut you to pieces—surely you see we can't fly in the face of Fate, now can we?"

Scarcely had the click of her heels died away when Henry Brown stepped out of a shadowed doorway. He was still yawning.

"Well, did you make love to her?" he asked.

"I did, signore," Luigi said respectfully. "I also asked her to marry me."

"What did she say to that?"

"She refused, signore."

"Good work, Luigi." Henry Brown chuckled. "Here's another 100 lire. You've probably given Patsy enough romance to last her the rest of her life. And, say, what's your address? Maybe I can send you some more business. I know a lot of middle-aged men with romantic wives."

Let's EXPLORE Your MIND

A COMMON SAYING IS, "EVERY CHILD IS DIFFERENT." IS THERE, THEN NO SUCH THING AS THE AVERAGE CHILD?

YES OR NO
DO THE COLLEGE GRADES AND HONORS RECEIVED BY A FATHER PROPHESY THE GRADES AND HONORS HIS SONS WILL LIKELY RECEIVE?
2
YES OR NO
3
WOULD STRICTER DIVORCE LAWS DECREASE DIVORCE?
YES OR NO

AUTHOR'S NOTE: These answers are given from the scientific point of view. Science puts the rights of organized society above the rights of individuals.

1. —People say this because they have had experience with only a few children, perhaps only one. Prof. L. M. Terman of Stanford, says in his "Measurement of Intelligence:" "The average child does exist and in very large numbers. About 60 per cent of all school children test between 90 and 110 IQ (Intelligence Quotient) and about 40 per cent between 95 and 105. That these children are average is attested by their school records as well as their IQs." Of course Dr. Terman is here measuring only intelligence, but much the same holds true in measuring any other trait, although those combinations that produce the total personality do make pretty wide differences in individuality.

2. —Drs. Edgar Schuster and Ethel Elderton of the Galton Eugenics Laboratory, University of London, have shown by the records of 4000 graduates of Oxford, in which institution both sons and fathers have competed for the same honors, that 36 per cent of the First Honor sons had fathers who had won First or Second Honors; of the Second Honor men, 32 per cent of their fathers had won First or Second honors; and so on down to the sixth class, of whose fathers only 12 per cent had won First or Second honors. Evidently it pays to have a smart father—and mother, too.

3. —It seems extremely doubtful. In an exhaustive study entitled "Statistical Analysis of American Divorce," Dr. Alfred Cahen of Columbia, concludes that laws have almost no effect on divorce. He shows that in many states the divorce laws have scarcely changed in the past 60 years, yet the divorce rate in them has increased about five-fold, but in the eighteen states that have radically changed their divorce laws since 1922 the effect, he says, has been "negligible." Those who advocate a Federal Uniform Divorce Law should know that already 43 states have substantially uniform laws.

DON'T STOP ME- I MUST SEE JANE- I THOUGHT I WAS PROPOSING TO HER!
YES, BUT THOUGHT-
YOU THOUGHT IT WAS JANE- IT TURNS OUT TO BE TANIA- THE POINT IS- YOU WERE HAPPY —
THEY ARE ENOUGH ALIKE TO BE TWINS- ISN'T IT TANIA YOU REALLY LOVE- IF NOT, WHY DID HER KISSES MAKE YOU SO HAPPY?

It's Something Like Ping-Pong

WE'RE having plenty of fun with that tin can they call the world court.

* * *

Europe threw it into our back yard four times. And four times we tossed it back.

* * *

A couple of years from now it will start rattling again. We are accused of something they call splendid isolation. Nothing can be so bad if it's splendid.

* * *

If splendid isolation means quarantine that doesn't make us a boy with the mumps. We require no more outside assistance than a man picking his teeth.

The ship of state doesn't tow international garbage scows in the seven seas. They build tug boats for that.

YES SIR! THESE PAPERS I HAVE IN MY POCKET, WHICH YOU CLAIM, MR. EL DORADO, BELONG TO MY UNCLE, JARRED BLUNT. HIS NAME IS ON THEM. HE WAS SWINDLED AND YOU MUST KNOW WHO...
MY DEAR CHAP, MY ONLY CONCERN WITH THOSE BONDS WAS TO RETURN THEM TO YOUR UNCLE, WHO I KNOW VERY WELL.
YOU MEAN YOU'LL LET HIM HAVE THEM WITHOUT TRYING TO CAUSE ANY MORE TROUBLE?
THAT'S WHY I HAD THEM IN THAT ENVELOPE ALL READY TO ADDRESS AND DROP IN THE MAILBOX ON THE EVENING WHEN YOU UNFORTUNATELY "THOUGHT" I WAS A BURGLAR AND THREW ME INTO A CLOSET HERE.
WELL, I THOUGHT.. I MEAN....MY UNCLE TOLD ME I'D HAVE PLENTY OF TROUBLE... ANYHOW, I GOT THE PAPERS AND ..
...ALL IS WELL.... EXCEPT THAT WE'VE CAUSED QUITE A BIT OF TROUBLE FOR THESE GOOD FOLKS. AND YOU SAID SOMETHING ABOUT CATCHING THE NIGHT TRAIN, MR. BROWNING. AND I HAVE A DINNER ENGAGEMENT.
BY JOVE, IT'S AWAY AFTER SIX. SUPPOSE WE RUN ON, OLD FELLOW? I'LL PASS THE DEPOT AND DROP YOU OFF THERE, GLADLY.
WELL I'M SORRY TO RUSH AWAY, BUT WHEN I GET BACK I'LL SEE YOU ALL AGAIN AND EXPLAIN EVERYTHING BETTER. GOOD BYE.
GOOD BYE, BROWNING.
GOOD-BYE.
GOOD NIGHT MR. EL DORADO.

BLACKIE, IT SAYS HERE THAT MR. HARDESS FLINT, THE MILLIONAIRE, IS STAYING AT ROCKY GLEN INN--- AND THAT'S JUST OVER THE HILL FROM HERE!
HE MIGHT BE INTERESTED IN PUTTING OUR BEAUTY MUD ON THE MARKET! WE'LL NEED MONEY TO FINANCE IT, AND HE HAS WHAT IT TAKES!
YEAH, AND HE'LL PROBABLY PART WITH IT AS EASILY AS A CHEST PARTS WITH A POROUS PLASTER!
DON'T BE SO PESSIMISTIC!
HE'S A HARD GUY TO SEE! INSTEAD OF HAVING "WELCOME" WRITTEN ON HIS DOORMAT HE HAS "I DARE YOU" AND IT'S SPELLED WITH BANANA PEELS!

AT SUNSET THAT EVENING THE FALCON, LITTLE LING TAI, AND THE PET FOX, PANGO, DISAPPEAR INTO THE MOUNTAINS THAT OVERHANG THE MONASTERY. LET'S FOLLOW THEM
